T. M. WAMPLER INDICTED IN TAX FRAUD CHARGES

Returns on Income for 1930 and 1931 Cited by Jury in Baltimore.

PROMINENT LAWYER DENIES HE IS GUILTY

Naming Comes as Surprise in District; E. B. Dean Is Among Witnesses.

T. Morris Wampler, for 25 years one of the leading members of the District bar, was indicted in Baltimore yesterday for allegedly violating the income tax laws.

The indictment came from the special grand jury after that body had sat for three days listening to the testimony of a dozen witnesses who had been marshaled by United States Attorney Simon Sobeloff, of Baltimore, with the assistance of experts from the Treasury Department.

The charges against Mr. Wampler are that for the taxable year of 1930 he placed his income at $16,816.87, on which an income tax of $412.76 was paid. It is the accusation of the Government that in reality Mr. Wampler's income for that year was $49,771.98, on which a tax of $4,547.71 should have been paid.

Second Count in Bill.

There are two counts in the indictment, the second relating to alleged evasions in 1931. This count charges that the lawyer's income was $96,946.22, whereas his return proclaimed only $37,761.85. On the amount claimed by the Government a tax of $15,018.59 was due while Mr. Wampler actually paid only $2,555.78.

In a statement issued last night, the attorney intimated that his indictment had arisen through the efforts of some one who was "personally biased" toward him. He declared that his friends would withhold judgment "until my side of the case is presented to a jury."

Practically every one of the twelve witnesses who were paraded before

Mermoz Reaches Africa on Flight

Ends First Leg of Mail Route by Air to Argentina.

Port Etienne, Rio de Oro, Africa (Friday), Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Jean Mermoz, famous French pilot, attempting to lay a route for an airmail line between Europe and South America, landed his airplane here at 2:30 a. m. today after a flight from Marseilles, France. His final destination is Buenos Aires.

He was accompanied by Capt. Carretier as assistant pilot, Capt. Mailloux as navigator, Mechanic Jousee and Radio Operator Manuel.

The route covers some 14,000 miles of mountains, desert and ocean—one of the most hazardous which the famous airmail pilot yet has sought to follow for regular use.

Girl, 16, Is Killed In Auto Collision

Special to The Washington Post.

Haywood, Va., Jan. 12.—Delma Back, 16, of Haywood, was killed and her brother, Louis Back, suffered a severe injury to his shoulder early last night when their car collided head-on with the automobile of Fred Utz, 3 miles east of Hoover Camp, on the Rapidan River.

A small nephew of the Backs escaped injury, as did also Utz. Both cars were badly smashed, but neither of them overturned.

Plea to Reconcile Failing, Man Kills Himself to "Make Wife Happy."

JOHN HARMON.

Because it would "make his wife happy," John Harmon, 27-year-old garage employe, last night stood on the sidewalk before the home of his mother-in-law, 1246 I street southeast, and blew off the top of his head with a shotgun.

NIGHT SESSION FAILS TO END LONG'S STAND

Glass Forces Senate to Sit Overtime, But Filibuster Is Continued.

(Associated Press.)

Unquelled after three days of delay, but with its inspiration—Senator Long, of Louisiana—weary and hoarse, the filibuster against the Glass banking bill pushed on to the end of last night's session and waited only today to begin again.

Forced into the first night meeting of the "lame duck" session, the forces of the newcomer from the far South, who are holding up the banking legislation, finally won a recess at 6:33 p. m.

Just before, the breathing spell had been denied them by 51 to 14.

The vote was the first taken since the bill became the unfinished business on January 5, and its status last night was so "unfinished" that no one dared predict its ultimate fate.

Senator Glass, of Virginia, who had served notice he would see to it that the Senate continued to "legislate," forced the night meeting in an effort to break the filibuster which Long has carried on almost single-handedly for three days.

Two Governments Resign in Balkans

Maniu Quits in Dispute With Carol; Greek Cabinet Out.

Bucharest, Roumania, Jan. 12 (U. P.).—Premier Julius Maniu and his cabinet resigned today after a disagreement with King Carol. Old differences between Premier Maniu and Carol were said to have arisen in recent weeks and to have come to a head after a conference between them last week. The crisis arose over a conflict between Ion Mihalche, minister of interior, and Col. Marinescue, chief of police in Bucharest, who was backed by Gen. Dimitriescue, head of the gendarmie. King Carol supported the latter pair, while the premier was on Mihalche's side of the argument.

Athens, Greece, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—The ministry headed by Premier Panayoti Tsaldaris resigned today. It was organized last November. The resignation will be handed to the president tomorrow.

Tirana, Albania, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—A new cabinet was formed today by Premier Pandeli Evangheli, who retained the portfolios of president of the council and minister of justice.

Springfield, Mo., Bandit Claims He's 'Pretty Boy'

Springfield, Mo., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Three men, one of whom said he is "Pretty Boy" Floyd, Oklahoma outlaw, robbed the Bank of Ash Grove of between $2,000 and $3,000 shortly before 1 o'clock this afternoon. The robbers escaped in a small automobile, south out of Ash Grove.

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—An unmasked white man held up the Exchange Bank here during the lunch hour today and escaped with approximately $2,000 in the fourth robbery of the bank in two years.

EUROPE READY TO QUIT PARLEY ON ECONOMICS

Three Powers Feel Paris Default Ends Hope of Adjustment.

STRAWN SEES HOOVER BUT RESULT IS SECRET

America to Push Program Despite Fact Hopes for Success Dim.

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

Unofficial reports that at least three of the principal European powers now have abandoned all serious plans for the projected world economic conference this spring were presented yesterday to high Government officials here.

Although comment upon these developments was denied both at the White House and State Department last night, it was acknowledged in official quarters that profound differences between England and France in the American debt negotiations last month have created a diplomatic and political atmosphere in Europe which makes further pretense of international economic collaboration wholly futile.

Simultaneously with receipt of these reports, Silas H. Strawn, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, conferred with President Hoover yesterday afternoon at the White House. Mr. Strawn, who has just returned from the annual meeting of the Council of the International Chamber of Commerce, at Paris, told newspapermen as he left the Executive offices he had merely reported to Mr. Hoover upon the general trend of the international chamber's meeting. He declined to discuss European politics, or to indicate what he told the President regarding recent economic developments on the Continent.

Bandit Pair Shoot Owner of Grocery

Trapped in Store, Gunmen Open Fire and Flee Without Loot.

A pair of ruthless bandits, fearing capture when trapped in a grocery at 442 O street northwest, last night opened fire on the proprietor, wounded him in the right arm and made their escape without obtaining loot.

Their flight to the street was followed by a heavy meat cleaver, hurled by the wounded storekeeper, Hyman Gamerman, 38. The cleaver missed one of the bandits by inches and imbedded itself in a wall.

Gamerman told police two Negroes entered his store shortly after 7 p. m. Without ceremony one of them produced a gun and demanded cash. Hardly had the demand been made when Mrs. Nellie Gamerman appeared in the rear doorway. At the same time an unidentified colored man entered the front. The intruders, seeing escape blocked, opened fire. They disappeared through a nearby alley. Gamerman was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Senate Votes Quiz On Tax Refunds

Congressional Group to Pass on All Claims of $5,000 or More.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate yesterday voted to require that the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation approve all tax-refund claims of $5,000 or more before they are paid.

The measure, offered by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, as an amendment to the first deficiency appropriation bill, was passed, 51 to 26, after the Senate, by 52 to 26, had suspended the rules to take it up.

Its passage followed sharp criticism by Senator Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, of the present system under which he said Secretary Mills, or one of his appointees, had apparently passed on a refund of $5,869,961 to the estate of his father, of which Mr. Mills was executor.

Refunds to Samuel Insull, the Willys-Overland Co. and others were cited by McKellar in urging the measure.

Bill Caucus

Democrats Meet Today to Try to Crush Hoover's Regrouping Plan.

By J. BERNARD M'DONNELL.

Fearful of failure of their plan to give to Franklin D. Roosevelt, after he takes office as President on March 4 next, authority to reorganize governmental machinery, has caused Democratic leaders of the House to call the first major caucus of their membership since the convening of the present session.

The caucus is to meet at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the House chamber, when party leaders will try to whip into line every Democratic vote in support of the resolution of Representative John J. Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, repudiating all of the changes in governmental agencies proposed by President Hoover in the course of 58 executive orders, tentatively issued under authority given him by the last session of Congress.

Whether they will be able to force the Cochran resolution through the House is a question with Democratic

COURT FLAYS BOOK ATTACKING HOOVER

New York Supreme Court Justice Throws Out Suit Over Profits.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Supreme Court Justice Peter Schmuck today denounced a book entitled "The Strange Case of Mr. Hoover Under Two Flags" and threw out a suit for an accounting of its profits.

He ruled that "neither plaintiff nor the defense are entitled to equity's consideration" because they did not come to court with "clean hands."

James J. O'Brien, a former policeman, brought the suit against John Hamill, author of the book, and William Faro, Inc., the publisher. He said he financed Hamill in assembling the material and writing it.

"The time-honored and rigorously adhered to tenet of equity that a supplicant must come into court with clean hands has startling application to the matter at hand," Judge Schmuck said in his decision. "Clean hands is a legal euphemist having no particular application to physical cleanliness to any part of the body, but rather refers to the acceptability, cleanliness and decency of the claim put forth. A litigant whose claim is repugnant may be most irrisistible in appearance and yet will receive scant consideration. Clean hands, therefore, means that a claim tainted with deceit and impurity of motive, which if of decent character would perhaps receive approval, will unhesitatingly be ignored.

"The most superficial examination of 'the strange case of Mr. Hoover under two flags' causes instant anger because of its patent unfairness and untruthfulness. The documents and records * * * are patently excerpts garbled and selected because standing alone they permit inferences never intended. It does not need the sworn testimony of the impecuniosity of the harrassed and miasmatic-minded author and his too late regret to prove that in order to create demand by notoriety in place of merit, no hesitation was felt in 'the hands' searching over the dunghill of shameless insincerity.

"This was known to the plaintiff and not only known to him, but insisted upon by him in the furtherance of the scheme to make money at the expense of one whose supreme and exalted position forbids his descending to even notice the slobbering yapping of the jackals of slander.

SENATE ACTION ASSURES FUNDS FOR D. C. RELIEF

First Deficiency Bill Is Passed as Long Rests Filibuster.

YIELDS FLOOR AFTER APPEAL BY BINGHAM

Measure Carrying $625,000 for Aid Work Here Goes to House Today.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

Filibustering tactics were laid aside in the Senate yesterday long enough for members to pass the first deficiency bill, carrying $625,000 for local unemployment relief, supplementing funds that will be completely exhausted in the next 48 hours.

The $31,000,000 deficiency bill will go to conference today. Even if agreement is reached immediately by conferees, and reports made today to House and Senate, approval could not be voted before tomorrow, under lay-over rules.

It is doubtful this can be done, and the President sign the measure by the end of the week, when all current relief funds will be gone.

Money Is Assured.

But yesterday's Senate action gives definite assurance the money will be forthcoming. Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, chairman of the Senate District Appropriations Committee, said local relief authorities can borrow necessary money on the strength of House and Senate approval of the $625,000 item. That figure can not be disturbed by conferees.

Senate passage followed numerous attempts over a period of three days to break through Senator Huey Long's filibuster against the Glass banking bill, and efforts of Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, to put through an amendment restricting income tax refunds.

The break finally came late in the afternoon, after Senator Bingham had sharply called attention of senators to the urgency of the local situation. With the combined intercession of Senate leaders, a vote was taken on a motion to waive the rule against legislation on an appropriation bill, holding up the McKellar proposal. It carried, and immediately afterward the Senate adopted, 51 to 26, the McKellar amendment. It was smooth sailing thereafter for the deficiency bill. With this out of the way, Senator Long resumed his filibuster.

McKellar Amendment.

The McKellar amendment provides that all tax refunds of $5,000 or more must be passed on by the joint congressional committee on internal revenue taxation. Refunds must have affirmative action of this body before being paid.

Senator Bingham's successful effort to penetrate the filibuster, followed one less successful, at the outset of yesterday's session, and numerous futile attempts by Senator Charles L. McNary, assistant Republican floor leader, and Senate Appropriations Chairman Frederick Hale, throughout the week.

Shortly after noon the Connecticut senator asked Long if he would yield "for a brief appeal in behalf of the poor——" That was as far as he got. Long declined to give way. He said Bingham did not have "the right kind

23 Words in Coolidge Will

Document, Written on Folded Sheet of White House Stationery, Filed for Probate in Northampton; Is in Late President's Own Handwriting.

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—The will of Calvin Coolidge, leaving all his property to his widow, was filed in the Hampshire County Probate Court this afternoon. It consisted of 75 words in Mr. Coolidge's own handwriting on a folded sheet of White House stationery.

At the top of the sheet were the words, "The White House, Washington."

Then, in the former President's own handwriting, followed:

"Will of Calvin Coolidge, of Northampton, Hampshire County, Massachusetts.

"Not unmindful of my son, John, I give all my estate both real and personal to my wife, Grace Coolidge, in fee simple.

"Drawn at Washington, District of Columbia, this twentieth day December, A. D. nineteen hundred and twenty-six.

"CALVIN COOLIDGE."

After the signature were the words:

"Signed by us on the date above in the presence of the testator and of each other as witnesses to same and the signature thereto:

"EVERETT SANDERS,
"EDWARD T. CLARK,
"ERWIN C. GEISSER."

The three witnesses served the President, respectively, as secretary, personal secretary and stenographer.

The word "of" apparently was omitted between "this twentieth day" and "December," as the former President in writing the document turned the page after writing the word "day" and began with the word "December" on the second page of the folded sheet.

The outside of the will was inscribed today—just as any other will would be:

"Will of Calvin Coolidge, filed January 12, 1933. Albert E. Addis, Register."

FARM BILL TO BOOST 7 PRODUCTS' INCOMES IS PASSED BY HOUSE

Provisions of Farm Relief Bill Approved by House

(Associated Press.)

Here are major provisions of the emergency farm bill the House passed last night and sent to the Senate:

Seeks to guarantee a minimum cash return to producers of wheat, cotton, tobacco, hogs, dairy products, rice and peanuts.

This cash return would be a commodity's prewar ratio with industrial commodities except for opening months of operation when it would not apply to tobacco.

During this initial stage these minimum prices would rule: 75 cents a bushel on wheat and rice, 9 cents a pound on cotton, 5 cents a pound on hogs, 26 cents a pound on butterfat, 3 cents a pound on peanuts.

If the farmer received less, a tax sufficient to make up these prices—and later the prewar parity—would be levied on processing and distributed to him on his share of domestic consumption.

Acreage and production curtailment would be required of the participating farmers. Tariffs would be boosted by the amount of the processing taxes. The cotton tax would be levied against silk and rayon.

The Secretary of Agriculture would administer the plan. A Presidential proclamation could make it effective for a second year.

REPRESENTATIVE MARVIN JONES, author of the farm relief bill.

Allotment Plan Wins in Vote, 203-151.

SENATE FIGHT IS SEEN SURE

Minimum of 75-Cent Wheat and 9-Cent Cotton Aim.

(Associated Press.)

A new and drastic economic venture for the farmer's sake was sent to the Senate last night by a big House majority.

It was the emergency domestic allotment bill that would boost farm incomes by fixing minimum prices on seven major agricultural commodities. The House cast 203 votes for the plan to 151 against.

The bill faces an uncertain fate in the Senate, where strong opposition to it has been expressed among some Democrats as well as Republicans.

Opposed by Smith.

Although sponsors of the legislation are hopeful of obtaining a majority for it, Senator Smith, ranking Democrat on the Agriculture Committee, has indicated his opposition; and Chairman McNary has expressed doubt of its wisdom, though he has introduced a similar measure by request.

Senator Borah, Idaho Republican and a strong influence in farm legislation, has not committed himself, but has expressed serious doubts about the legislation to his constituents.

House party lines were split on the measure drafted by Jones, of Texas. Once the doors had been opened to admit rice, peanuts and butterfat along with the four commodities recommended for benefits by the Agriculture Committee—wheat, cotton, tobacco and hogs—they promptly were closed again by a close-knit Democratic and Republican progressive majority.

Favored by Roosevelt.

The bill, assailed by its opponents as "unworkable and unconstitutional," but favored with the reported support of President-elect Roosevelt, received 139 Democratic, 63 Republican and 1 Farmer-Labor votes to 101 Republican and 50 Democratic nays.

Six days of debate and labor on its complex provisions preceded the final vote in a crowded and noisy chamber. Members were impatient and voted again and again to shut off debate.

A 5-cent a pound tariff on jute was voted out, 114 to 34, on a Republican motion by Snow, of Maine. But the bill passed carried import duties of 5 cents a pound on short-staple cotton, 5 cents a pound on oils and fats in addition to existing rates, and boosted tariffs on all benefited commodities by the amount of the processing taxes.

Prewar Parity Ration.

It is through these taxes, which opponents said would put a billion-dollar burden on the consumer, that the bill seeks to guarantee the farmer a minimum price on his share of the domestic consumption of the seven commodities. Ultimately, this minimum price would be the prewar parity ratio with industrial commodities.

But starting out, the measure, entitled "a bill to aid agriculture and relieve the existing national economic emergency," would establish an initial

Rosso, New Envoy, Arrives From Italy

Says Mussolini Is Vitally Interested in Friendship With U. S.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Augusto Rosso, new Italian Ambassador to the United States, arrived today on the liner Conte di Savoia and said he had received instructions to do everything possible to aid the cause of Italian-American friendship.

The Ambassador said Premier Mussolini considers this friendship an important link in the reconstruction of the world. The premier, he said, is more interested in the United States than in any other nation, except Italy, because "Mussolini likes youthful things, and the United States is young and dynamic."

Ambassador Rosso until recently was a representative of Italy at Geneva and a delegate to the disarmament conference. He said he considered himself an "old American," as he came here first in 1910 as secretary of the Italian Embassy, and was counsellor of the embassy from 1922 to 1925.

President Delays Philippine Action

House Democrats Prepare Fight to Override Veto, Expected Today.

(Associated Press.)

While an expectant Congress waited in vain for a Presidential veto message on the Philippine independence bill, President Hoover late yesterday decided to delay his action upon the much-controverted measure until today.

In virtually every official quarter of the Capital it appeared taken for granted that the Chief Executive would veto the measure to give the islands political freedom within ten years. The House of Representatives had prepared itself for a vote on overriding the veto before nightfall.

Speaker Garner and Representative Snell, of New York, the Republican leader, reached an agreement to lay aside House consideration of the farm relief bill immediately upon arrival of Mr. Hoover's message. Democratic leaders felt there was sufficient strength to set aside the veto. The agreement reached between Snell and Garner probably will hold over for today.

EXTREMISTS' HAVEN BOMBED; 20 KILLED

New Disorder in Casa Viejas; Known Death Toll in Week Is Now 70.

Madrid, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—A death toll of 70 in the Extremist disorders this week in several parts of the young Spanish republic was counted tonight as reports trickled in of a new outbreak at the town of Casa Viejas, where civil guards and assault guards bombed a house where a number of Extremists had taken refuge.

Reports reaching Cadiz from Casa Viejas said the dead and seriously wounded in that region were estimated at this time at more than 50. Communications were almost impossible. Further reinforcements of guards were reported en route from Cadiz.

The known death toll in the series of disorders comprised 48 Extremists, 18 guards and 4 bystanders.

In commenting on the disorders at Casa Viejas, the government announced that the house in which the Extremists took refuge was destroyed by hand grenades.

A laborer, Juan Ramos, not connected with the Extremist movement, gave an eyewitness story of the disorder at Casa Viejas at dawn. He

Election Officers Face Prosecution

Ballots on Which Name of McKee Was Written Were Not Sent In.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Between 1,200 and 1,800 election officials face possible prosecution, the district attorney's office announced tonight, after it was discovered that in 315 of the 998 election districts the paper ballot rolls were not forwarded to the Board of Elections. It was on these rolls that voters recorded their written choice for Joseph V. McKee for mayor. McKee was not a nominee and therefore his name did not appear on the voting machines.

Assistant District Attorney James Wallace announced that every member of the 315 election boards will be subpenaed within a few days and asked to sign a waiver of immunity before being taken before the grand jury investigating alleged election fraud.

He pointed out that if the election officials wilfully neglected to send in the rolls they can be convicted of a felony, and if the neglect was a result of ignorance, they can be convicted of a misdemeanor.

California Assembly Urges Resubmission

Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—The Assembly of the California Legislature today approved a resolution memorializing Congress to submit to State conventions an amendment to the Constitution to repeal the eighteenth amendment. It proposes that delegates be elected in each State and that the Federal Government pay the costs.

The vote was 54 to 21, all Democrats voting for the resolution. It also is before the State Senate.

CUBA SLAPS CENSOR ON AMERICAN PRESS

U. S. Free Paper Sale Barred as Fish Demands End of Machado "Terror."

Havana, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—The government censor must approve all United States newspapers and magazines before they may be sold on Havana news stands, it was learned today.

News of this action got abroad shortly after dispatches from Washington told of a resolution introduced in Congress, declaring that Cuba has been governed recently by a reactionary dictatorship and calling on the President of the United States to exert his influence to settle Cuba's political conflict.

Rigid censorship prevented publication of the Washington news, but it quickly spread throughout the city.

Opposition Elated.

Persons sympathetic with the opposition to the government of President Machado were elated over the Washington action. In some quarters connection was seen between the resolution and President-elect Roosevelt's conference this week with Secretary of State Stimson.

Some Cubans expressed the opinion that the resolution was the direct result of United States Ambassador Guggenheim's unofficial action last week, when he asked the Government for guarantees for Angel Alvarez, a student arrested for terrorism. A few hours after the ambassador acted, Alvarez was killed, police said, while trying to escape.

Previously Juan M. Gonzalez Rubiera was killed similarly. His mother called at the American Embassy to ask protection for him, but failed to see any one in authority.

Provocation Intentional.

Some Cuban commentators assert that the opposition has determined to provoke American intervention. According to these sources, the recent outburst of terrorism which has assassinated officials is part of that campaign.

Last November the government extended the olive branch, inviting exiles back home and freeing political prisoners, but the opposition turned its back.

"Machado must go," said Col. Carlos Mendieta, one of the leaders of the 1931 movement, when freed from jail.

(Associated Press.)

A resolution charging that Cuba has been governed recently by a reactionary dictatorship "on fear, force and violence" and calling upon the President to "exert his influence" to create amity between Cuban political factions was introduced yesterday by Representative Fish, of New York.

Fish, a Republican member of the House foreign affairs committee, charged in the measure that "the liberties of the Cuban people, guaranteed by the United States through the Platt amendment, have been suppressed and all but destroyed and a large part of Cuba has been under martial law for various lengths of time and the University of Havana padlocked and schools closed.

Freedom Suppressed.

"Freedom of speech, freedom of the press and of assembly, and the right of habeas corpus have been suppressed or have virtually ceased to exist," it added.

"The United States," it declares, "has the unquestioned right to intervene in order to maintain a government in Cuba 'adequate for the protection of life, property and individual liberty;' in accordance with the treaty of independence containing the Platt amendment."

It concludes:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Congress that the President of the United States exert his influence and extend to the government and the people of the Republic of Cuba the good offices of this Government and its aid in bringing about a mutual understanding and amity among the various political factions, based on the restoration of the civil rights of the Cuban people, and the establishment of a government in Cuba 'adequate for the protection of the lives, property and individual liberty,' as guaranteed by the Platt amendment."

DEMOCRATS PLAN FOR CAUCUS TODAY

leaders. They are afraid that some of their members have been persuaded to support one or another of the 58 proposals of the President and will seek to escape being bound by the party caucus. They don't expect many recruits from the Republican side.

If the resolution is not approved it will develop a parliamentary situation which will strain the efforts and ingenuity of Democratic leaders who already are committed to reserving for Mr. Roosevelt the prerogatives of reorganizing the Federal executive machinery. It may mean an upset.

Effect of the Cochran resolution would be to disapprove all of the President's proposals. This is in line with the Democratic proposal to reserve all questions of governmental machinery for Mr. Roosevelt to pass upon. It is proposed to give him much broader authority than was given to President Hoover.

The first test on the Cochran resolution, against which two minority reports have been filed by Republican members of his committee, will come before the House rules committee at an open session at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Cochran has asked for a rule giving special parliamentary status to his resolution. It would provide for two hours of debate, evenly divided between proponents and opponents, for one motion to recommit, but for no possibility of amendment. The resolution would have to be accepted or rejected.

The significance of the action of the House Democratic leaders in calling a party caucus on the question is to be found in their fear that one of the expressed and major parts of their legislative program for this session may be defeated.

The Republican minority of Mr. Cochran's committee wants each of the 58 proposals of President Hoover to be voted on separately. Mr. Cochran wants all rejected. That is in line with his party's declarations against giving Mr. Hoover any leeway in reorganizing the governmental machinery. The Democrats say they are justified in their attitude because Mr. Hoover has had four years in which to make economic readjustments, during two of which he had the support of a Republican Congress, and has failed to do so.

Law to Protect Investors Is Urged at Kreuger Inquiry

Stock Exchange Official Makes Plea After New Match Collapse Facts Are Bared; Senate Group Recesses to Prepare for Insull Inquiry.

(Associated Press.)

Senate stock market investigators wrote new chapters into the amazing life story of Sweden's mysterious Ivar Kreuger yesterday and recessed their inquiry to prepare for an excursion into the sensational career of America's Samuel Insull.

The Kreuger inquiry not only developed new facts about the tangled financial affairs of Sweden's match king, but brought a recommendation from an official of the New York Stock Exchange for legislation to protect investors.

Frank Altschul, chairman of the exchange's stock list committee, frankly testified that market officials were deceived by Kreuger's reputation, and recommended legislation to require independent audits of all companies selling securities to the public.

Chairman Norbeck indicated the next phase of the inquiry would be an investigation of the collapse of the gigantic Insull utilities empire, on which committee agents have been working for months. It is not yet ready for presentation, he said.

Gilmer Siler, lean gray-haired partner of Eastman-Dillon & Co., told of a loan of $1,000,000 made by his firm to Kreuger shortly before his suicide in Paris last year, and revealed that in the closing days of his life, at least, the Swedish financier was speculating desperately.

Just before Kreuger's suicide, Siler revealed, Eastman-Dillon began to sell short in Kreuger stocks with the financier's approval from a trading account established for him.

Earlier in the day the committee heard criticism of Lee Higginson & Co., American bankers for Kreuger, because of their failure to prevent substitution of inferior collateral back of $26,500,000 Kreuger & Toll bonds they floated in this country.

Prof. Max Winkler, New York professor of economics and president of the American Council of Foreign Bondholders, said the Higginson Co. had failed to fulfill its obligation to its customers by permitting the substitution of the collateral, which he said resulted in the bonds being worth $140 today instead of $490.

Altschul testified that the stock exchange did not require an auditing of the Kreuger company in listing the bonds because it was not the general practice at that time with such European concerns.

"It was generally believed that the credit of Kreuger & Toll stood so high that security was not needed," he said, explaining that the stock exchange took into consideration the reputation of the company.

Although subsequent developments revealed Kreuger as "the greatest swindler of all times," Altschul said, at that time, "the doors of every chancery in Europe were open to him," and the exchange regarded the security back of the bonds as "added velvet not necessary at all."

Since then, he said, the exchange has adopted a rule preventing the listing of new securities without an audit of the offering company.

PRESIDENT MAY FISH ON LEAVING OFFICE

Considers Trip to Panama; Moving Task Already Is Under Way.

(Associated Press.)

His evacuation of the White House already begun—with 82 new filing cases assembled to hold his personal papers—President Hoover yesterday considered another sail fishing expedition as one of his first activities after turning over the Presidency to Franklin D. Roosevelt on March 4.

Just what Mr. Hoover plans to make his job after returning to his Palo Alto, Calif., home, his aids say even he himself has not decided. But for a while at least he probably will sort out and whip into shape the great sheaf of now historical data he has collected since his World War days abroad.

Tentative arrangements now are being discussed for Mr. Hoover to travel by sea to Palo Alto through the Panama Canal. He has never seen that great waterway.

Should this trip be made, the President would stop off in Panama to try for sailfish and other deep sea game of the Southern waters.

Sailfish have been caught in that vicinity more than 10 feet long, topping the prize catch of his recent Florida angling expedition by more than 2 feet.

Quietly, the Hoovers already have started to move some of their personal belongings from the Executive Mansion. An expert packer from the Army Quartermaster Corps has been at work for several days, crating some of the vast store of personal gifts accumulated by a President in office.

FARM RELIEF BILL PASSED BY HOUSE

marketing period for all affected commodities but tobacco.

This period would begin 30 days after enactment and end with the 1933-34 marketing year defined by the Secreary of Agriculture, who is made all-powerful in administering the plan.

Values Are Fixed.

During it, the following values are fixed as the farmer's fair return:

Seventy-five cents a bushel on wheat and rice; 9 cents a pound on cotton; 5 cents a pound on hogs; 3 cents a pound on peanuts, and 26 cents a pound on butterfat.

With the exception of hogs, a processing tax equal to the difference between these values and the actual market price would be levied and distributed to producers on the basis of their percentage of domestic consumption.

In actual operation this would be accomplished through the issuance of "adjustment certificates" at the time of sale. The certificates would be transferable and redeemable at the Treasury.

The hog certificate, during this period, would be equal to the difference between the actual market price and the 5-cent a pound value. But the processing tax would be graduated, starting at 3½ cents a pound the first 60 days, going to 4 the next 60, and then to 4½ up to the 1933-34 year.

To participate in the bill's benefits during the initial period, hog producers would have to market 20 per cent less tonnage than during the same time in the preceding year, and dairymen would have to show their production had not increased over the corresponding month of the year before.

Since dairy products are not on an exportable basis, the estimated 5-cents-a-pound bounty on butterfat would go to 80 per cent of production. Growers of the benefited crops in the initial period would not have to show any acreage reduction to benefit.

Would Cut Down Total.

Once the 1933-34 crop year has started, all producers would have to cut down in order to benefit and the dairyman would have to show no increase.

For the crop growers, a 20 per cent acreage reduction would be necessary. For the hog producer, a 20 per cent tonnage cut under a past average period and a 20 per cent reduction in corn acreage would be required.

In this 1933-34 year, the prewar parity level would be the minimum price and the basis for estimating the processing tax on six commodities. On hogs the mimium price would be 6 cents a pound plus an additional half-cent a pound for each 10-point advance in the index of factory employment.

DOLAN SAYS PENDING CUT IS BAD EXAMPLE

Head of Postal Association States Furlough System Causes Hardships.

The Senate Economy Committee's proposed 1 2-3 per cent additional pay cut for Government employes "is in keeping with the program of the great financial interests" and sets an example for similar penalties in private employment, Thomas F. Dolan, president of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks, said in a statement last night.

"The furlough method has resulted in undue embarrassment to the postoffice clerical personnel, and the additional 1 2-3 per cent wage reduction proposed by the Senate Economy Committee would, if incorporated for the coming fiscal year, place in operation a furlough wage cut and the direct additional wage cut, which would add in unlimited measure to the confusion already effected," Mr. Dolan said.

He asked support of an amendment proposed by Senator Coolidge (Democrat), Massachusetts, which would reduce the number of days an employe can be furloughed in one month from 5, as in the present law, to 2.

"The adoption of the Coolidge amendment will be a source of much gratification and will remove one of the undesirable and disturbing features of the furlough plan of wage reduction," he said.

NIGHT SESSION FAILS TO HALT FILIBUSTER

a whisper, Long immediately accepted the challenge and drew assistance from Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, who voted against the recess motion of Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, in order to make a long-planned speech.

The tall, white-haired Oklahoman read a number of telegrams from citizens in his State, including one from the State banking commissioner, objecting to the bill's branch bank provisions.

After he had proceeded for about three-quarters of an hour, Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, moved a recess; and the few senators present agreed.

Branch Banking Criticism.

The general tenor of the Thomas telegrams was that branch banking would destroy home-owned State banks and wreck individuality in banking.

Thomas told the Senate it had been in session six weeks now, and the country was in the fourth year of depression, without proper remedial steps being taken.

"At a trial November 8," Thomas continued, "a President was convicted, an administration wrecked and a political party injured if not destroyed."

He then reviewed Democratic victories and turned back to the banking bill with the remark that hungry people and farmers can "scarcely get a hearing, yet when the financial interests want one it's easy—even to the extent of holding the Senate in session at night time and arresting senators and bringing them here."

He grinned at Glass as he said this, referring to Glass' motion that the sergeant at arms be instructed to bring in enough absentees to make a quorum when a roll call showed three members short of the required 49.

Statement Challenged.

Glass interrupted him at one point to term "utterly preposterous fabrications" statements that the bill had not been looked into fully and all points thoroughly investigated.

Just a moment later Glass called "the grossest injustice" ever done him the hearing of an independent banker held last Saturday by the banking committee, contending the bill was not properly before that committee, as it was before the Senate for consideration.

When Thomas said a great deal of pressure was being brought to put through the bill and there was much propaganda in its behalf, Glass, with a show of anger, broke in angrily and said:

"Does the senator mean he believes undue or sinister influences have been brought to bear?"

Thomas said he did not mean that, particularly if Glass thought it applied to him.

In the midst of the fight to force the night session as a means of wearing down the filibuster, backers of Long threatened to block all legislation unless prompt attention were assured both for currency inflation and hunger relief legislation.

SLASH IS PROPOSED IN WAR SUPPLY BILL

$110,000,000 Cut Favored by House Committee Sure of Strong Debate.

(Associated Press.)

Another memorable contest over expenditures on the War Department impended last night after the House Appropriations Committee reported an annual supply bill allowing $345,833,000 for that branch of the Nation's armed forces for the next fiscal year.

The total was $110,000,000 under what is being spent by the department this year. The expenditures were larger this year, however, because $60,000,000 was allowed the department in emergency relief and construction legislation passed last session. Hence the net reduction in the new War Department bill, as compared with that passed last session is $50,000,000.

The $110,000,000 cut included both military and nonmilitary activities, although the latter supplied $79,324,000 of the reduction.

Promise of Contest.

Some cuts proposed by the committee brought immediate promise of contest. One due for floor debate was that which would suspend Citizens Military Training Camps for a year. A similar proposal by the committee last year was overridden by the House after a spirited controversy.

The committee, however, yielded on one point that it also tried but failed to put through last year—a reduction in Army officer strength from 12,000 to 10,000. In its report discussing this question, the committee said that because of the rejection of this decrease, "this matter is not again presented, although it would seem that the conclusion of any informed persons, without bias or self-interest, must be that both economy and efficiency would ensue from such a course."

Although Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Chief of Staff, ranked the United States seventeenth in military strength of land forces and Brig. Gen. George B. Pillsbury, Assistant Chief of Army Engineers, said flood control work must be sharply reduced if the budget estimates were accepted, the committee refused to make any increase in these items. It did, in fact, report it had reduced budget estimates for all War Department activities by $6,696,000.

National Guard Increase.

One notable budget increase, however, of $9,134,000 was granted the National Guard. Calling the guard the "efficient and foremost adjunct of the regular establishment," the committee said the increase would allow motorization of National Guard artillery units and permit 48 instead of 22.75 armory drills as the budget proposed.

Possibly because of the objections of Chairman Ross Collins of the subcommittee to horses in the Army, the bill carried not a cent for the purchase of additional mounts.

The Air Corps allowance was continued without substantial reduction, the bill carrying $23,537,000 and authorizing contracts for new airplanes to the extent of $3,000,000. This will allow the purchase of 375 new planes and let qualified pilots fly an average of 200 hours.

Two items in the bill were approved by the committee for the same amounts as recommended by the budget. They were $39,388,000 for rivers and harbors and $19,653,000 for Mississippi River flood control works.

GEORGE LUSBY RITES.

Obsequies Will Be Held at Maryland Park Home Today for Boy.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 o'clock at his former home in Maryland Park, Md., for George Lusby, who died Wednesday after being shot in the abdomen while at play. He will be buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

The dead child, who was a student at the District Line School, is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Lusby, and his four sisters, Elsie, 18; Mildred, 16; Eleanor, 14, and Margaret, 10.

DR. JOHN DONALDSON.

"Technocracy, Fact or Fancy," will be the subject of a talk to be given by Dr. John Donaldson, professor of political economy at George Washington University, at a luncheon meeting of the Advertising Club of Washington Friday at the Raleigh Hotel.

Realizing the current interest in this much-discussed subject, officials of the club requested Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, to help them select a well qualified speaker to present the topic from the layman's viewpoint.

Formerly connected with the Department of State and the Department of Commerce as well as other Government bodies and agencies, Dr. Donaldson is well known as an international economist. He has written a number of books and is a regular contributor to a number of economic journals both here and abroad.

Dr. Donaldson is co-founder of the Academy of World Economics here. The talk will be broadcast over Station WOL between 1 and 1:30 p. m.

PLATFORM ACCORD IS REPEAL BILL AIM

Bratton Offers Amendment Providing Ratification by Conventions.

(Associated Press.)

A senatorial tug-of-war to bring the prohibition repeal resolution into conformity with political platforms was definitely promised yesterday with the introduction of an amendment providing for ratification by State conventions instead of by legislatures.

Senator Bratton (Democrat), New Mexico, proposed the convention system, which was advocated in both Democratic and Republican platforms, while a Senate committee undertook further redrafting of the House 3.2 per cent beer bill to remove constitutional objections.

The Bratton amendment, which he described as a better way to sound out the sentiment of the people, will come up when the Senate gets around to consideration of the repeal resolution approved last week by the full Judiciary Committee.

After a two-hour discussion of the beer bill, the Judiciary Subcommittee, headed by Senator Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, was said by the chairman to have made "some progress," but a redrafting of the new language was necessary. He predicted the rewritten bill would be in such shape today as to have a vote by the subcommittee of five.

BANKRUPTCY ACTION IS NOW SEEN LIKELY

Garner Promises Early Vote In House If Committee Favors Change.

(Associated Press.)

The possibility that Congress, in the few remaining weeks of the session, may amend the bankruptcy laws, something it has tried to do for years without result, last night was distinctly increased.

Speaker Garner said if the House judiciary committee acted favorably on the McKeown-LaGuardia bills to change the bankruptcy statutes today, the measures would be given consideration by the House in the near future.

The proposals are designed to extend the time of payment for the individual debtor and to give corporations the privilege of reorganization without going into bankruptcy.

Chairman Sumners, of the judiciary committee, told newspapermen he expected favorable action at the meeting. No hearings are planned.

"If we ever began hearings," McKeown said yesterday, "no telling when we would get through."

The principles of the two pending bills were indorsed by President Hoover in a message to Congress Wednesday in which he said speedy legislation on the subject was imperative.

Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, who has headed a Senate committee which has made an exhaustive study of bankruptcy laws, also has given the House bills his approval.

McKeown's measure would enable the individual debtor to effect an arrangement for an extension of time in which to pay what he owes, or to pay on the installment plan to his various creditors over an extended period.

The provisions of his bill applying to corporations would permit either a voluntary or involuntary reorganization during which debts might be scaled down to a point approximating present assets.

LaGuardia's bill applies to railroad corporations and it is similar to McKeown's, save that the reorganization would be under supervision of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

HOPE OF ECONOMIC PARLEY GROWS DIM

tinue its preparatory arrangements for the projected conference, particularly insofar as these preparatory steps involve informal consultation between the outgoing and incoming administrations.

Officials here are publicly committed to the task of smoothing the way for President-elect Roosevelt in every phase of international affairs, and there has been no indication thus far that the incoming President has abandoned the idea of a general world conference. Accordingly, President Hoover's recent recommendation for a $150,000 appropriation for the American delegation to the economic conference will be pressed by Democratic leaders in the House, where the measure already has been approved by the foreign affairs committee.

Yesterday's developments here confirmed for the first time earlier reports that the French default on the American debt payment due December 15 had left a long train of unhappy events across the stage of European diplomacy. So strained have the pro forma economic discussions become in Europe since that date that many informed observers abroad now entertain grave doubts also as to whether the armament conversations will be resumed in the near future, as planned.

French Policy Handicap.

The new opponents of the economic conference in Europe are understood to take the ground that no appreciable results could flow from a general parley as long as the French default hangs in the air. In London, as well as Washington, there is a growing conviction that until France moves to reestablish her international integrity by some adjustment of the default, no good could come from further conferences.

England's reluctance to press for the world conference, in view of developments last month, also is reflected in the semiofficial attitude of Italy and in the official attitude of Germany. So widespread is Europe's present doubt regarding the possible results of the conference, that formal abandonment of the preparatory negotiations in the near future would not come as a surprise to informed American observers.

Roosevelt Stand in Doubt.

Mr. Roosevelt's firm refusal to offer any authoritative indication of his own prospective policy on international economic questions has intensified the feeling of futility and uncertainty hanging over the whole situation abroad.

American business had been looking hopefully to the projected world economic conference as a possible international assault upon the forces of depression and deflation, but leaders in various sections are reported to have become reconciled in recent weeks to the now imminent collapse of the whole plan.

COBLENTZ TO AVOID HIS SEAT IN SENATE

However, Has No Intention of Resigning, Former Bank Head Says.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 12.—State Senator Emory L. Coblentz will not resign from the Maryland Legislature, he intimated in a formal statement issued today, but if his colleagues desire it he will stay away from the Senate sessions until the Court of Appeals has passed on his conviction for violation of the State banking laws.

Senator Coblentz defined his intentions after it was reported that a resolution calling on him to resign might be introduced in the Senate. He is under an 18-month sentence from the Allegheny County court for accepting deposits in his Central Trust Co. after he knew it to be unsound. The bank, with headquarters in Frederick, Md., failed in the fall of 1931.

The resolution asking for Senator Coblentz's resignation will not be offered, in view of his willingness to remain away from the sessions, those behind the measure said last night. It was authoritatively stated, however, that the resolution would be introduced if he is present when the Senate reconvenes Tuesday night. He represents Frederick County in the Senate.

John Masefield to Recite Poems at National Today

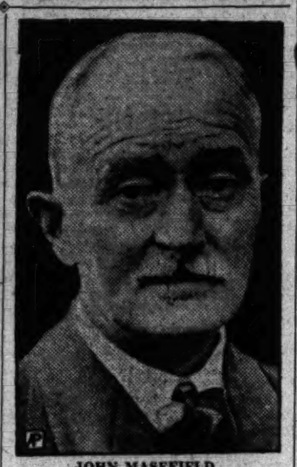
Poet Laureate Will Stop at British Embassy While Here.

John Masefield, British poet laureate, will be guest of the British Embassy during his stay in Washington today. He will lecture at 4:40 p. m. at the National Theater.

Mr. Masefield's lecture will be chiefly the reading of his verse. Included in his program will be excerpts from "Salt Water Ballads," one of his earliest works.

Other famed poems from his pen which he will recite will be "The Widow in Bye Street," "The Everlasting Mercy" and "Reynard, the Fox."

Mr. Masefield will be introduced by former Justice Wendell Phillips Stafford, of the District Supreme Court. Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, and Lady Lindsay will attend the recital.



JOHN MASEFIELD.

MELLON HINTS DEBT ISSUE IS POSTPONED

Ambassador Indicates Move Will Be Delayed Until After March 4.

London, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon intimated today that the Hoover administration intended to do nothing further, between now and March 4, toward solving the war debts crisis.

The gray-haired ambassador, in his first press conference since returning from a holiday in the United States, told correspondents that Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson "is not in a position to give me any definite instructions" on war debts.

"I have not received any more, and in view of the forthcoming change of administration, hardly expect any," Mr. Mellon commented. He gave the impression that nobody was really in a position to know what may happen on this vital world problem, adding with a slight smile:

"Really it's something the outcome of which I should like to know myself." He professed to have no idea of the course the debts controversy between Great Britain and the United States would take after March 4.

The ambassador said if he were approached by the British government for advice as to the best way to reopen the debt problem with the new administration, he would be obliged to seek instructions from Washington.

"On the whole, however, I am unable to ascertain any apparent change in the attitude of Congress toward the European debtors," Mr. Mellon remarked.

JURY IN BALTIMORE INDICTS "RUM KING"

William Plummer Charged With Hijacking Federal Prohibition Agents.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 12.—The United States grand jury here today returned an indictment against William Plummer, whom dry officials have called the king of southern Maryland bootleggers and an excellent dry informer. Plummer was charged with hijacking dry investigators in Calvert County last September.

The indictment against Plummer charges him with assaulting the four dry investigators who were convoying a cargo of seized liquor from Calvert County to Baltimore last September.

Plummer was implicated in the case by three other men arrested in connection with the hijacking. These men pleaded guilty in the United States District Court and have been sentenced.

It was during the hearing prior to the imposition of sentence that William R. Blandford, deputy prohibition administrator for Washington, said Plummer "is the king of the bootleggers in southern Maryland and the best informer I ever had."

Plummer is now at liberty in $15,000 bail.

The imperative facts of this trial leave but one impression and that impression is that none of the parties involved is entitled to equity's protection, for the plaintiff, as well as the defendants, is made hideous by the meanness and ruthlessness of the attack.

"Unfortunately, this issue does not permit a complete and satisfactory determination of this matter by consigning these books to the depths of oblivion. Until proper action is taken, 'The Strange Case of Mr. Hoover Under Two Flags' and 'Hoover's Millions and How He Made Them,' will continue to sadden and outrage decency. In addition to the reasons ascribed by counsel that no relation of master and servant exists between plaintiff and one of the defendants, that no restrictive covenant forbidding that defendant from writing a book is shown, and the failure to show any literary property in the book, the court principally grants the motion to dismiss and awards judgment to the defendants because neither plaintiff nor the defense are entitled to equity's consideration.

"As it would be a travesty on commonsense to grant the usual sop awarded a successful litigant, no costs will be granted."

TROOP MOVES CLOUD PEACE TRY IN CHINA

Japanese Planes in Survey of Jehol Sector During Blizzard Weather.

Shanghai, China, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Opposing military leaders in the Shanhaikwan area were reported to have begun a peace parley at Chinwangtao today, but dispatches from Jehol told of troop movements which indicated that the armies were preparing for new campaigns.

Japanese planes were said to have reconnoitered Jehol City, once the summer residence of the Manchu emperors and now the provincial capital. The planes flew north over Chaoyang, second largest city, 1,400 miles away and close to the Manchurian border.

The same sources reported Japanese troops in Manchuria and southern Jehol were preparing for an invasion of the latter province. One Japanese expedition from Shanhaikwan was reported marching through Jehol to the town of Lingyuan, 90 miles northwest of Shanhaikwan, on the way to Jehol City.

Thirty-five trainloads of Japanese soldiers were said to have left Mukden, Manchuria, for Chinchow, the southern base which lies to the east of Jehol.

It was a Japanese report which told of the peace conference at Chinwangtao. A Chinese officer representing Gen. Ho Chu-Kuo, commander at Shanhaikwan, was said to have talked with the Japanese commander at the latter's headquarters. Further conversations were expected.

Chang Hsiao-Liang's headquarters at Peiping announced that there had been no major activity in the vicinity of Shanhaikwan or at the Chiumenkow Pass for the past 48 hours. Apparently the Japanese still held the northern end of the pass, 14 miles northwest of Shanhaikwan, and the Chinese held on to the southern end. Both sides seemed satisfied to let this situation continue for the present, but it was reported that Chinese reinforcements were on the way.

All these operations were conducted in a blizzard of sleet and snow which sent the temperature to 40 degrees below zero in some places.

4 Die, Score Hurt As Trains Crash

Injured Rushed to Iowa Hospitals After Wreck at Bridge.

Knoxville, Iowa, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Four members of the crew were killed and more than a score of passengers injured, many seriously, when two Burlington gas-electric trains collided head-on 6 miles west of here tonight.

Ambulances were rushed to the scene and took the dead and injured to hospitals here and at Des Moines. One of the trains caught fire after the collision and the flames spread to the debris of the other train.

Burlington officials said one train had run out of fuel and was being towed by a steam locomotive at about 30 miles an hour when it collided head-on with the other train, going at about the same speed, on a bridge near Donnelly Station, 4 miles west of here.

Topeka Society Couple Found Shot to Death

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Mr. and Mrs. Dan C. Hammatt, both active in Topeka society, were found shot to death today in the bedroom of their fashionable home in the exclusive Westboro residential district.

Their deaths were pronounced murder and suicide by Dr. H. L. Clark, Shawnee County coroner. Hammatt, 52, was cashier for a life insurance agency here.

mark a step in the direction of the old spoils practices.

Senator Dale predicted the proposal will not meet with Senate favor. He said he will take the floor, if necessary, to oppose its enactment. The Treasury-Postoffice bill, containing the economy rider, will be called up on the floor today or tomorrow.

Senator Dale's criticism of the economy recommendations extended to the proposed 1 2-3 per cent additional pay cut, and a provision abolishing the Bureau of Efficiency.

"I think we have cut enough from the salaries of Government employes," the Civil Service chairman said. "It certainly would be a step away from economic recovery."

The Vermont Senator said he thinks this is an unusual time for the Senate Economy Committee to propose abolition of the Bureau of Efficiency, which can show a record of millions of dollars in economies.

Senator Dale's Civil Service Committee yesterday voted to report favorably a bill giving employes of the legislative branch of the Government the same retirement benefit privileges enjoyed by other Government workers. The measure was amended and simplified before it was reported. Senator Dale later offered an amendment to the Treasury-Postoffice bill exempting retirement compensation from any cuts.

Shaw Says Economy Act Undermines Merit Basis

Pending economy legislation was characterized as forming the basis for "a most insidious and dangerous attack upon the whole merit system in Government" by John Arthur Shaw, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, last night when he addressed the Tariff Commission Lodge, No. 34.

A provision in the economy bill reported by the Senate committee repealing civil service laws requiring the Civil Service Commission to keep the personnel records of officers and employes of the departments and independent establishments especially drew fire. Under the bill, these records would be turned back to the departments and establishments and would be "available" to the commission, he pointed out.

Citing the provision of the bill which authorizes the Veterans' Administration to require employes of its homes, hospitals and combined activities to work a full seven-hour day on Saturday, Mr. Shaw declared that this threatens "the leadership which we had hoped the Federal Government would continue to exert in personnel administration. This, in effect," he continued, "abolishes the Saturday half-holiday for approximately 12,000 Government employes and places the Government in the position of setting the precedent of lengthening the work week."

Mr. Shaw declared that the married person provision in the economy act is another blow to the merit system.

Officers of Bureau of Engraving and Printing Lodge No. 29 were installed last night by George L. Jeffrey, fourth national vice president of the A. F. G. E. John R. Newman was installed as president. Other officers are: James C. Reeves, Miss Vinnie L. Harrington, Mrs. Tracy Thornett, Charles J. Beck, Marian Skinner, John Conroy, George A. Freer, Ethel Cantor, Allen D. McCartee, George E. Jacobs, Mary Campbell, Bertha Duncan, Miss Viola B. Ingalls and Miss Nicie Perrell.

Cars Pass Hitch Hikers Carrying Dying Child

Bakersfield, Calif., Jan. 12 (U.P.). Burns from scalding water claimed the life of 3-year-old Henry Dusanne today when his parents were unable to "hitch-hike" their way to a hospital 35 miles distant.

The child was injured Monday, and his condition grew worst until the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francisco Dusanne, were forced to set out on foot for the city. They took turns carrying the child while the father vainly hailed passing motorists for a "lift."

Late at night a driver picked them up 20 miles from the city. The baby was dead.

ROOSEVELT DENIES CHOICE OF CABINET

Appointments Are Due Next Month; Farm Relief Is Conference Topic.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—All Cabinet speculation was ruled out of order today by President-elect Roosevelt with the statement he has made no offer and probably would make none until next month.

Turning from a series of conferences revolving principally about the farm relief problem, the President-elect in a meeting with newspapermen brushed aside the Cabinet speculation, adding that it would be guesswork now even on his own part to write on the make-up of the official family.

Only one person is regarded here as a certainty in the Roosevelt Cabinet—James A. Farley, of New York, the genial chairman of the Democratic national committee. He is slated for Postmaster General.

Gov. Woodring Calls.

Harry H. Woodring, who just retired as Governor of Kansas, led off the farm discussions today at the Roosevelt home.

A delegation representing the American Association of Creamery Butter Manufacturers, headed by W. F. Jensen, of Chicago, urged revenue legislation on products in which foreign oils and fats are used as a means of stopping these importations.

Today's Roosevelt conferences were concluded by a call from Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee. After some misunderstanding it was finally arranged that William G. McAdoo, Senator-elect from California, should visit the President-elect at his Hyde Park home Sunday night.

Traylor Is Mentioned.

Names of Illinois men suggested for Government positions in the new Democratic administration were submitted by Senator Lewis.

The list included Mayor Anton J. Cermak, of Chicago; Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National Bank of Chicago; Carter Harrison, former Mayor of Chicago; Bruce Campbell, of East St. Louis; Vincent Y. Dallman, Springfield publisher, and Judge Louis Fitzhenry, of the Federal court.

Senator Lewis emphasized that this list does not foreclose appointment of any other Illinois men.

He added that he had not talked places; merely men.

Tonight Mr. Roosevelt attended a private dinner at the home of Basil O'Connor, his law partner. Tomorrow afternoon he leaves by automobile for Hyde Park to spend the last week-end before departing for the South.

Great Eastern Stages Announces Rate Cut

A 25 per cent reduction in all one-way fares was announced yesterday by the Great Eastern Stages, extensive transcontinental bus system. The rate cut is in addition to the special $1 excursion fares now in vogue on the system, it was said.

A large reduction in fares to Los Angeles and the West via St. Louis also was announced. This trip includes free pillow and porter service from coast to coast. The Great Eastern Bus terminal here is at 1349 E street northwest.

HIS APPEAL FAILING, MAN KILLS HIMSELF

estranged wife, Mrs. Margaret Harmon, 22. He left, his wife said, with avowed intentions of taking his own life, and showed her a shotgun packed in a suitcase.

Harmon apparently went to his home, at 1224 Eleventh street southeast, wrote a lengthy note explaining his action and returned to the house to kill himself. He was found by two policemen, who chanced to be nearby and heard the shot.

Mrs. Harmon told Detective Sergt. Dennis Murphy that she and her husband has been separated more than a month. He asked her last night to accompany him to Windsor, Md., where he had obtained a new job. They have two children, Dorothy, 2, and Betty, 10 months old.

Harmon, a former marine, was employed at the Navy Yard Auto Wrecking Co. A note found in his pocket said he "couldn't live without his children and that he was shooting himself to make his wife happy."

Neither Mrs. Harmon nor her mother, Mrs. Julia Wood, with whom she was living, heard the shot.

Tax Trial of Capital Man in Baltimore Alleges False Returns in 1929.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 12.—Following the testimony of a number of Washington bank officials, the trial of Samuel R. Beard, of Washington, admitted by his attorneys to be a gambler and bookmaker, on charge of violating the income tax laws, was adjourned until tomorrow by Judge W. Calvin Chestnut. Beard pleaded not guilty.

Beard, according to testimony at the trial which began today before a jury in the United States District Court, failed to make returns on income derived during 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927 and 1928 until the year 1929 and only did it then after an investigation was begun by officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

It is the contention of William Curran and Morton P. Fisher, defense attorneys, that their client did not know he had to make a return on an illegal income.

"When Mr. Beard learned that the Government was willing to take taxes on money gained in an illegal manner, he made the returns," Mr. Fisher told the jury in his opening statement.

The Government is contending through Charles G. Page and Cornelius Mundy, both assistant United States district attorneys, that Beard's income tax returns for the years in question and for 1930 were incomplete and deliberately falsified.

C. E. Adams, former deputy collector of internal revenue and a Government witness, testified that he had started the investigation into Beard's failure to pay a tax, and that when the matter was brought to Beard's attention the latter gave him all the information he wanted.

Other officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau testified that they had traced Beard's bank accounts and other dealings and had found discrepancies in his returns.

The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY

RILEY.

IT was a very satisfactory year from a financial view for the U. S. Departments of Commerce and Justice Beneficial Association, that organization with around 6,500 members, increased from the original 1,425. Yet, the beneficial association is only three years old.

One hundred thirty-five death benefits have been paid. Insurance costs only $1 a month and benefits range from $250 from ages 56 to 60 to $1,000 for ages up to 40. An analysis of death claims discloses the rather startling fact that a substantial portion of the total benefits were in connection with certificates of members who were under 40, so that it can not be argued that insurance of this kind is beneficial only to older members.

Group disability insurance also is afforded members of the two departments.

The association has a surplus now of about $80,000.

Those directing the association's affairs are Malcolm Kerlin, administrative assistant to Commerce Secretary, president; J. D. Secrest, chief clerk, Mines, vice president; W. S. Erwin, chief Division of Purchases and Sales, secretary-treasurer. Directors are J. S. Collins, Aeronautics; E. K. Ellsworth, Census; D. L. Parkhurst, Coast and Geodetic Survey; A. K. Brown, Fisheries; Walter Asmuth, Foreign and Domestic Commerce; W. P. Harman, Lighthouses; J. D. Secrest, Mines; R. H. Osmer, Navigation; A. W. Kaiser, Patent Office; W. E. Downey, Radio; D. E. Thomas, Standards; G. L. Shorey, Secretary's Office; Mrs. A. E. Keysery, Steamboat Inspection, and E. J. Matchett, Justice. Except in these cases, the directors serve as collectors:

C. C. Weidemann, Coast and Geodetic Survey; Miss Rose Lee Rainey, Fisheries; George Kefover, Lighthouses; H. W. Rausch, Mines; J. I. Cusick, Patent Office; L. W. McKee, Radio; A. S. Coiner, Standards; T. P. Jones, Secretary's Office, and Miss Gertrude F. Brown, Steamboat Inspection.

Pray tell us, Pretty Katie,
How is your coal-denrod?
"My flowers, sir, they're lacey-like,
And how they grow, sans sod!"

"IN many of the Government offices now you see depression flowers blooming," says Miss Mary G. Worthley, mathematics, McKinley High School. "They are those lovely, fragile, lacey, crystal-like growths that come so amazingly from a lump of soft coal.

"To make a good depression flower you need a lump of soft coal, five tablespoons of water, five tablespoons of bluing and five tablespoons of salt. Mix the water and bluing and four tablespoons of salt together and pour over the coal. Sprinkle the other tablespoon of salt on the outside.

"In a day or two your ugly lump of coal will bloom like the Rose of Sharon. Curious, isn't it? Some add coloring matter, but the white is lovelier."

Ten thousand dollars, if placed end to end would——. The Washington Post Sunday will carry information on this matter of interest to women in Government service.

It was one grand sight—

Along both banks of the Seine. Up and down the avenues. After all, what was the rush? Through all the arrondissements, up the heights of Montmartre, along the Eiffel Tower, past the Pantheon, the city continued to unfold before him as a veritable wonderland. Swarmi 'in Wonderland! That was it!

Perhaps Gus had better get gas. Perhaps he had, but Swarmi failed to get the idea over. Gus thought he meant he had a flat tire. And so he had, but Swarmi wouldn't have admitted he was a flat tire. Traveling on air. That was Fedd, in the flesh. He thought he detected scents from one of those Parisian perfume factories squeezing out rose essence for the Yankee holiday trade in Paris, Tenn.; Paris, Ill.; Paris, Tex.; Paris, Ky.; Paris, Canada, and Paris, Green.

Perhaps he did detect perfume. Well, what of it?

Uncle Sam's commercial representatives abroad have their smiles with it all. Here's a grin from across the water:

"A foreign lady, wife of a consular official, wrote a letter to a friend in another city in the same country and concluded with the following sentence: 'I would write more about local conditions, but you know there is a strict censorship of mail, hence I must be guarded in what I say.'

"A few days later she received a note reading as follows: 'Your statement in your recent letter to a friend in —— about the censorship is incorrect. The censorship is withdrawn. (Signed) The Censor.'"

FROM COMMERCE—

Mrs. E. B. Watts, chief clerk's office, ill recently, is back. And so is T. B. Morrow, assistant to Malcolm Kerlin.

FROM CENSUS—

News about Miss Kate McShane, Eric S. Stearns, Samuel W. Wood, Miss Bess Voris, George H. Young, George W. Schreech covers nine States. But they're all back on the job after having done a little traveling hither and yon recently. Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Alabama, Michigan, Illinois, Maryland and Ohio were visited on the respective trips.

Miss Jean McAllister has returned to duty in the public schools after a delightful visit to Detroit via Greyhound Lines.

IN the slogan contest of the National Federation of Federal Employes, result of which was announced at the executive council banquet Wednesday evening, Mrs. Albra E. Reising, Veterans' Administration, captured first prize, $25. Her offering is "Never Falter; Fight Forever." Second prize of $10 went to Mrs. Ruth Carry Brooks, Department of Labor, "Never Forget Former Evils."

Third prize was won by Miss Lucia A. Henderson, Interior Department, "Never Forget Faithful Effort." Fourth prize, Miss Jean L. Galt, Veterans' Administration, "Numbers Force Fair Enactments." Fifth, Robert A. Hatter, General Accounting Office, "New Fidelity Forever Essential."

Mrs. Daisy S. Edgerton and Miss Bertha Mae Pate, Forest Service, received gold pins and honorable mention.

NOTE on executive council, N. F. F. E. banquet:

The diners sang "Jingle Bells." Silverware tapped against water glasses provided the jingle.

Portrait committee, National Federation of Federal Employes, in charge of arrangements leading to the execution of the portrait of Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, by Richard S. Meryman. This portrait was presented to the National Federation at a banquet at the Willard Wednesday night by the District of Columbia Federation of Federal Employes Unions. Left to right, upper—Dr. J. Franklin Meyer, William Sanger, Louis A. Rosafy. Lower—Miss Belle Trouland and Miss Gertrude M. McNally.

John W. Ginder, chairman, quoted a recent editorial from The Washington Post as summing up the situation "better than I could present it myself."

Microphones and amplifiers carried speakers' voices perfectly.

Perfect attention given speakers. None of those usual undertones.

Dr. Franklin J. Meyer presented the portrait of Luther C. Steward, national president, N. F. F. E. John J. Fitzgerald accepted.

Louis A. Rosafy announced the slogan winners.

Entertainment committee did the job well, or swell.

We met some new friends, hotably Eulan I. Snyder, attorney, Navy Department.

Leslie C. McNemar was toastmaster. From Brooklyn, Milwaukee, Baltimore, San Francisco, Tuscon, Norfolk, Denver and Philadelphia came the executive council.

PRACTICALLY every known character of energy is utilized in transporting the mail, beginning with the man on foot and extending through a rather long category of facilities, including the pony express, dog sled, stage coach, steamship, electric car, underground pneumatic tube, motor vehicle, railroad train and airplane," says T. G. Mallalieu, superintendent, motor vehicle service, Postoffice Department.

"Seventy-four thousand motor vehicles are employed by the Postal Service, of which number 37,000 are furnished and used by rural carriers collecting and delivering mail in rural communities; 28,500 are provided by contractors for use in transporting mail between postoffices, steamship piers, railroad stations, and points of contact with electric cars, and in collecting and delivering mail in cities having free delivery service. The Postoffice Department owns 8,500 trucks which are used in the same manner as the vehicles secured under contract. In addition approximately 10,000 trucks are borrowed from other branches of the Government, or are rented, to assist in handling the increased volume of mail incident to the Christmas season."

Potomac Council, No. 211, National Union, an organization composed of employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Government Printing Office, will install officers Monday evening, at Pythian Temple. Senator Arthur S. Brown, assisted by members of the District of Columbia Executive Board, will officiate at the installation. A banquet and entertainment will be held, Henry J. Frank, president, reminds us.

That talk about the new stamp in memory of Calvin Coolidge "jumped the gun." We learn the stamp has not been ordered.

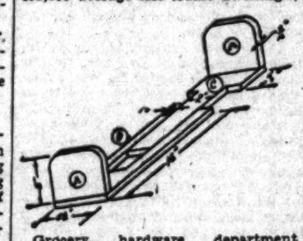
Rabbi Will Review Book.

Rabbi Solomon A. Metz, of the Adas Israel Congregation, will speak on Leon Fuchtwanger's latest book, "Josephus," tonight at the 8 o'clock religious services at the Sixth and I streets northwest synagogue.

Diary Hobby List

How to Make Book Ends.

(This is the first of a series of articles prepared by the National Committee on Wood Utilization in its effort to bring about utilization of second-hand wooden containers—boxes, crates and barrels, now thrown away or burned. More than 4,000,000,000 feet of lumber is used annually in making these containers. If suitable for construction purposes this lumber would build more than 400,000 average-size frame dwellings.)



Grocery, hardware, department stores and many other commercial establishments have a constant supply of second-hand wooden containers which they are usually glad to dispose of at little or no cost. Also, in many lumber yards one may secure old pieces of lumber at lower cost than regular yard items.

Since the lumber needed to make the articles which will be described is all less than 8 feet in length, no difficulty will be found in transporting it. In some cases it may be feasible for several boys to cart away the containers by wagon loads, as storekeepers frequently do not care to be bothered with handing out one or two containers at a time. In other instances the material may be carried in the car or on the running board.

Tools Needed.

If one desires a fairly complete outfit of tools, the following list is a guide:

1 claw hammer, 13-ounce; 1 screw driver, 4-inch; 1 2-foot folding rule; 1 crosscut saw, 22-inch; 1 try and miter square, 6-inch; 1 marking gage; 1 jack plane, 11½-inch; 1 racket brace, 8-inch sweep; 2 auger bits, ⅜ and ¾ inch; 1 oilstone; 1 jackknife; 2 chisels, ¼ and ¾ inch.

Adjustable Book Ends.

To make these book ends, secure—Two pieces 9-16 by 5 by 5¼ inches for ends (A). One piece 9-16 by 5¼ by 18 inches for bottom (B) and (C).

Shape ends (A) as shown. Cut the other pieces to form (B) and (C) as shown. Then nail ends (A) to the wide ends of (B) and (C).

Tomorrow—Dismantling Wooden Containers; How to Make Beach Sandals.

Three booklets, illustrated, entitled "You Can Make It For Camp or Cottage," "You Can Make It For Profit" (for unemployed) and "You Can Make It," can be obtained by addressing The Hobby Editor, Washington Post, and including 5 cents for each booklet, stamps or coin.

Piccard Reaches America; Tells Plans for New Ascent

His First Statement Roundly Scores Use of Tobacco; Greeting of Twin Brother Arouses Him to Discuss Heredity and Environment.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Prof. Auguste Piccard arrived from Europe today with hopes of arousing interest in a "superballoon" flight near the North Magnetic Pole and with decided notions about the use of tobacco.

The scientist's first act, as his boat neared its destination, was to request interviewers not to smoke and to announce that if he had the powers of a dictator he would prohibit the use of tobacco rather than alcohol.

Then he told of his plans to have new world scientists repeat his cosmic-ray chasing in altitudes higher than 10 miles—this time near the North Pole.

Prof. Piccard was greeted by his living image, Prof. Jean Piccard, naturalized American citizen, so like him that onlookers were puzzled to distinguish them apart.

Both are scientists and they are alike in all important respects save one. Prof. Auguste rides the peak of fame today while Prof. Jean is one of America's army of unemployed. For eight months Jean has been jobless. He is a former professor of chemistry at the University of Chicago and at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. More recently he has been engaged in industrial chemistry at Wilmington. He has three sons, and his wife, Jeanette, American born, is the daughter of the Chicago surgeon, John Ridlon.

The greeting of these brothers momentarily eclipsed the scientific purpose of the visit. While Prof. Auguste has been flying higher than 10 miles in balloons, Prof. Jean has been studying the lessons of heredity of which he and his brother are living examples.

They are halves of the same personality, Jean right-handed, the stratosphere flier so left-handed that he seized a newsman's pencil and drew lines with his left hand to illustrate his scientific ideas about cosmic rays.

"I have seen two other examples of identical twins," said Prof. Auguste. "In both the whorls of hair at the back of the head twisted in opposite directions."

There is the same difference in the Piccards' hair.

"The theory of identical twins is very important in study of the differences due to heredity and those due to environment," Prof. Auguste continued. "From the study we can obtain information of the extent to which disease is inherited. If only one of identical twins has the same illness, it is likely to be environmental in cause, but when both take it, heredity may be the most important factor.

"Identical twins very often have the same thoughts. It was so in school with my brother and myself. If he learned something, I was likely to learn the same thing, and also to forget what he forgot."

In different environments, and in different parts of the world, nature has graven the same lines on their faces in their 48 years of life. Today the American brother's wrinkles about mouth and eyes seemed a little more deeply etched. He is the author of the twin theory, that many left-handed persons are simply the result of identical twins, one of whom, the right-hander, failed to develop as far as birth.

Prof. Piccard left New York this evening for Washington to begin before the National Geographic Society a series of lectures now announced by his booking agency as taking him from coast to coast and lasting until about the end of March.

22 MARINE PLANES BACK FROM TROPICS

59 Aviators Who Have Been on Duty in Nicaragua Are Welcomed Home.

Fresh from the mountains of Nicaragua and guerrilla warfare with Sandino's men, 59 sunburned officers and enlisted soldiers of the Aviation Force of the Second Marine Brigade roared their 22 airplanes over the Naval Air Station yesterday morning, dipped in salute to their superiors and landed to receive a sincere but chilly Washington welcome.

The returning fliers were greeted by Secretary of the Navy Adams, the commandant of their corps; Maj. Gen. Ben Fuller, the chief of the bureau of aeronautics of the Navy; Rear Admiral William A. Moffett and a representative of the Nicaraguan government, Dr. Don Luis Manuel Debayle, present charge d'affaires of the legation here.

In addition the men were reunited with families, who in some cases had not seen them for more than a year, and with their children. There were both color and drama in the ending of the 2,500-mile flight that brought these men back home, the end of the only real fighting assignment in which American service fliers have participated since the World War.

Proceed to Quantico.

The welcoming exercises once over, the pilots warmed their planes and quickly headed south to Quantico, where they will be stationed temporarily until their next assignments are determined.

The entire force was under the command of Capt. Francis P. Mulcahy, U. S. M. C., and was divided in three units which left Archibald Field, Managua, ten days ago and proceeded here by different routes. Flight "A," led by Capt. Mulcahy, and Flight "C," commanded by First Lieut. Rayne D. Boyden, made up of land planes, flew by way of Mexico and the Gulf of Mexico to Charleston, S. C.

Greeted by Mrs. Archibald.

Flight "B," made up of amphibian planes and led by Capt. H. C. Major, proceeded by way of Honduras, Cuba, and Miami, where they participated in the All-American Air Races January 7 and 8. All three groups assembled at Charleston and flew to Norfolk Wednesday, proceeding here yesterday.

Among those welcoming the returning fliers was Mrs. Robert M. Archibald, well known local aviation executive, in honor of whose husband, the Marine Air Base at Managua was named Archibald Field. Capt. Archibald was killed in a crash three years ago.

said it was estimated that between 25 and 30 Extremists were killed when the guards raided their stronghold and swept surrounding homes with machine gun fire.

He said guards surrounded the Extremist house, which was on a hillside at the southren end of the town, while awaiting daylight. One assault guard volunteered to reconnoiter and was shot as he climbed the hill. A companion attempted to recover the body, but was dragged inside the house where he killed two Extremists before he was wounded. During the advance of the main force of the guards, Ramos said the Extremists used the body of the wounded man as a shield. The guards rescued their wounded companion before they were forced to retreat. Thereafter, they showered the house with bombs.

Twenty bodies were found and authorities believed several more are buried in the debris. The bombing was followed by intense machine gun fire against surrounding houses from which snipers had been harassing the guards. Several more were believed dead in these houses. As the unwounded snipers fled, guards posted on the mountainside shot down several.

TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCHES

Beaumont, Tex., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Damage estimated at $100,000 was done today when the Gulf Production Co.'s Burrell No. 6 oil well, near Tannett, blew in with a terrific gas pressure and was ignited by a spark. No one was injured. With the blaze still raging, arrangements were made to take a pump from the Spindle Top field here and pump mud into the hole.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—The South Carolina General Assembly today petitioned Congress to remonetize silver and remove "excessive tariff rates" as a step toward restoring world trade and prosperity.

Bethlehem, Pa., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Dr. John Frederick Woole, for nearly half a century a leading interpreter to America of the music of John Sebastion Bach, died today. He was 69. Mr. Woole, founder of Bethlehem's Bach Choir and organizer and conductor of the internationally known Bach Festival, had been ill for nearly a year.

Lexington, N. C., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—A $150,000 fire today completely destroyed the large box plant of the C. M. Wall & Son Co. here.

Seattle, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—"Please won't somebody sue me?" is the plea of City Treasurer Herbert L. Collier. He is required by law to sell hundreds of homes January 28 to satisfy delinquent improvement assessments, although the State Legislature is planning relief for distressed home owners. Collier has expressed hope some taxpayer will file an injunction suit against him to delay the auction until the Legislature can act.

Rogers, Ark., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Mrs. Nora Stroud, 48, viewed the stretcher which was to have conveyed her to a hospital for an operation, then fell dead from shock, physicians said.

Denver, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—When Joe Lane, Denver cowboy, missed his saddle he suspected a bootlegger of the theft. He attended an auction of confiscated property conducted by prohibition authorities yesterday. There was his saddle. He recovered it for $1.

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Helen Twelvetrees, screen actress who gave up her screen contract when her son was born two months ago, said today she had signed a new long-term agreement to play in films. In private life Miss Twelvetrees is the wife of Frank Woody.

BANK BANDIT IS SHOT AS AID GETS $35,000

10 Are Locked in Basement; Business Man Is Hero, Scorning Gun.

Cleveland, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—A bandit escaped with $35,000 in a suburban bank robbery today, but his companion was shot down by a gray-haired 53-year-old business man who wasn't afraid to "lead with his right" in front of a gun.

The carefully plotted holdup was staged in the quiet college town of Berea. Two gunmen entered the Commercial Savings & Loan Co., locked ten persons in the basemen and cleaned out the vault.

But the robbers failed to reckon with the fighting spirit of former Councilman Clarence Fox, whose life until today was concerned mostly with the prosaic business of dealing in toys and coal. Fox scorned a gun pointed at him. He swung a doughty right to the jaw that dazed the nearest bandit, snatched his gun and shot him twice.

During the excitement the other holdup man seized the loot and forced an 18-year-old youth to drive him to Cleveland, contemptuously repassing a crowd gathered at the bank. Tonight police were searching for a man with a little black bag stuffed with money.

The robbers worked swiftly. First they entered a next-door barber shop and trussed up two men. "You might see too much," the robbers said. Then they went into the bank and locked President W. H. Ames, his wife, five employes and three customers in the basement. They had no more than grabbed the cash when Fox arrived.

Police identified the wounded man, who was in a serious condition, as Harvey S. Craig, alias Fred King, of Cleveland, who had served time in the State Reformatory for robbery.

T. MORRIS WAMPLER NAMED IN TAX FRAUD

the Baltimore grand jury was a Washingtonian. They included Edward B. Dean, sr., wealthy real estate operator; Norman Bowles, a disbarred lawyer; Abner Siegel, who was recently sentenced to serve 18 months in jail following his conviction on a charge of attempting to bribe a guard at the District Jail, and William J. Dow, a disbarred attorney.

Lengthy Secret Probe.

The indictment comes after months of secret investigation, during which it was learned that the operatives of the Treasury Department were on the trail of "a prominent Washington attorney" who was thought to have violated the income tax laws.

Mr. Wampler himself appeared before the grand jury as a voluntary witness. He was accorded that privilege by Mr. Sobeloff, who asserted that he wished to give Mr. Wampler an opportunity to make a statement.

Acting as defense attorney in scores of "big" cases here, Mr. Wampler had come to be one of the best-known lawyers practicing in the local courts. His last prominent case was that in which Gaston B. Means was convicted of the theft of $104,000 from Mrs. Evalyn Lucille Walsh McLean.

Colorful Figure.

Means was sentenced to serve fourteen years in prison after Mrs. McLean testified that he had promised to effect the return of the Lindbergh baby. He was, she said, to have negotiated with the kidnapers, who were to receive $100,000 in cash as a ransum for the baby that even then was lying dead in the woods not far from its home.

Long one of the most colorful members of the bar, Mr. Wampler's indictment came as a surprise in courthouse circles, where he is well and favorably known. Since publication two days ago of the fact that a Baltimore jury was investigating the income-tax returns of "a prominent Washington attorney" speculation has been rife as to whom the attorney was. There was much surprise when it became known late yesterday that Mr. Wampler was the man.

His statement in full is:

"I have never filed a false or fraudulent return and this indictment is the direct outcome of a personal bias and prejudice against me emanating from a source of which I am aware. I have no doubt but that my friends and clients, covering a period of more than a quarter of a century, will withhold judgment until my side of the case is presented to a jury and there can be no doubt with respect to my ultimate vindication."

ALEXANDRIA NAMES FIREMEN TRUSTEES

Roberts, Davis and McHugh Selected to Handle New Tax Funds.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
207 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Norman Roberts, Julian J. Davis and T. W. McHugh have been elected by the Alexandria volunteer fire department as trustees to handle the relief fund which the department will receive through a one-half of one per cent tax on fire and lightning insurance premiums, imposed by the last Virginia Legislature.

Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan attended the joint meeting of the several fire companies Thursday night in the city council chamber, and explained the provisions of the law. The trustees will be required to furnish bond of $1,000 and be the sole judges of the disbursements of the fund to injured or disabled firemen, or to dependents of men killed in service. They will receive no compensation and may be removed at any time for cause. No funds will be available until the 1934 General Assembly meets and allocates the amounts to the various localities, and Mr. Bryan was unable to estimate the amount which Alexandria will receive. He expressed the opinion that Alexandria will receive the tax paid on premiums collected in that section of Fairfax County which is served by the Alexandria department, lying west and south of the city limits.

The Alexandria Kiwanis Club celebrated Glad Rags Day yesterday, the requirement for admission being a bundle of old clothing. A considerable number of serviceable garments were obtained, which will be turned over to the Rev. Norris Lineweaver for distribution. President Irving Diener announced that a substantial cash donation also was made to the Alexandria United Charities.

The principal speaker at yesterday's meeting was Dan S. Hollenga, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce and vice president of the United Charities, who explained the activities of that organization.

Roger C. Sullivan, chairman of the forthcoming Kiwanis parade, which will feature a drive for old shoes for the poor, announced that plans are rapidly being completed. The parade will be held January 20.

The board of directors of the Citizens National Bank of Alexandria yesterday elected the following officers: Carroll Pierce, president and trust officer; Richard M. Green, vice president; George F. Downham, vice president and assistant trust officer; C. C. Brown, assistant vice president; Chester G. Pierce, cashier, and Miss Mary Hunt Roberts, assistant cashier.

D. C. AID IS ASSURED BY SENATE'S ACTION of a record on poor people's legislation."

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader, came to Bingham's aid in his second attempt. After conferring with McKellar and Long, he assured the Connecticut senator the matter would be taken up. Bingham yielded the floor. For a moment it appeared McKellar and Long would balk. Robinson muttered something about "childish behavior." The rebuke was not challenged, and the situation was saved for the District.

Bingham in his brief statement pictured the local relief situation. He pointed out that the money is needed at once to keep people from starving. He said any city in the United States except Washington that wants to look after its poor can do so promptly by calling its council together and taking action.

He concluded:

"Washington has no board of aldermen except the Senate."

Conferees were appointed by Vice President Curtis immediately on passage of the measure. They comprise Senators Hale, Smoot (Republican), Utah; Keyes (Republican), New Hampshire; Glass (Democrat) Virginia, and McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee.

The bill will be transmitted to the House today and conferees named immediately. House Appropriations Chairman Joseph W. Byrns, who probably will head the House conferees, has been ill for several days, but is expected back today.

The $625,000 appropriated will take care of local needs through the first six months of the current year. The remaining $625,000 asked by the Budget Bureau for the last six months of 1933 will be sought in the District appropriation bill.

Chairman Clarence Cannon of the House District Appropriations subcommittee said yesterday that lengthy hearings on the request will be unnecessary.

Besides the McKellar amendment, changes made in the first deficiency bill by the Senate include an addition of $150,000 for American participation in the World Economic Conference and $40,000 for Capitol expenses incident to the inauguration of President-elect Roosevelt.

E. H. KELLOGG IS BURIED.

Former Government Chemist Is Accorded Full Military Honors.

Edward H. Kellogg, former Department of Agriculture and Bureau of Standards chemist, was buried with full military honors yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery. The rites were under the auspices of the Chemical Warfare Service with which Mr. Kellogg served in France during the World War.

Mr. Kellogg died Monday at the age of 40 at his home in Pittsburgh, Pa. He was a native of Kansas and was educated at Kansas State College.

New Strawberry Named Fairfax of Bicentennial

(Associated Press.)

And now comes the Bicentennial strawberry.

The official celebration of the 200th anniversary of George Washington's birth ended last Thanksgiving, but the Agriculture Department yesterday named a strawberry the Fairfax for the Virginia county in which the first President spent much of his life.

Sweet, firm and disease resistant, the Fairfax was said by the department to be high in dessert quality and capable of standing long-distance shipment.

The bicentennial berry is a bright red.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS WILL MEET

County Officials to Be Heard by Group in Montgomery County.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post,
9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md.
Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Prominent county officials will address a meeting of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the courthouse at Rockville, Md. State Senator Robert G. Hilton, Miss Lavinia Engle, county delegate to the Maryland House of Delegates, and J. Bond Smith, general counsel to the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, will be the principal speakers.

The speakers will discuss measures which are before the General Assembly now in session, including a general analysis of proposed tax measures and of the legislation relating to the park and planning commission, which has been indorsed by the league. The meeting will be held in the hearing room of the Montgomery County Commissioners.

While repairing a lock on the door of his new home on Bells Mill road, Bethesda, yesterday, Charles Little, 63 years old, was stricken with a heart attack and died before Dr. W. O. Huff, of Bethesda, could be summoned. Dr. Huff and Justice of the Peace Fred Van Court, acting as coroner, concurred in a certificate of death from natural causes.

Mr. Little and his wife, Mrs. Nanny Little, and a son, Charles, jr., had moved into the new house several days ago from Wisconsin avenue. A second son lives in Washington.

Mrs. Gertrude Hill, 36 years old, wife of George W. Hill, died yesterday at her home, 214 Rugby avenue, Bethesda. Mrs. Hill had been ill for several years. Her husband had remained by her side until 2 a. m. when he went to bed. He found her dead when he awoke at 6 a. m. Besides her husband, Mrs. Hill is survived by a son, Earl C. Hill. She was a cousin of James Nichols, desk clerk at the Bethesda substation of the county police.

Charges of manslaughter which had been preferred against John T. Lynch, of Cabin John Park, Md., as the result of an automobile accident in which Lynch's car struck a pedestrian, Charles E. Stephens, also of Cabin John, the night of December 22, causing the death of Stephens, were dismissed by Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt in County Police Court at Rockville.

The judge held the accident unavoidable after it had been testified that Stephens stepped into the path of the car to avoid a pool of water in the road. The weather was foggy.

John G. Gott has been elected president of the Dickerson Community League. Mrs. Naomi Shoemaker was elected vice president and Mrs. Susie O. Nicholson, treasurer.

Mrs. Margaret Yulee Read, formerly of this city, died Tuesday at Indian Neck, Conn., it was learned yesterday. Mrs. Read, who was 78, will be buried in Washington. She was the widow of Charles Henry Read, of Richmond, Va., and the daughter of the late United States Senator David L. Yulee, of Florida.

Four children survive—Miss Nancy Wickliffe Read, New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. Barry Smith, New York City; David Yulee Read, of New York City, and C. Harold Read, Miami, Fla., and a sister, Mrs. Wallace Neff, of this city.

ARLINGTON TO SEEK FUNDS FOR RELIEF

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

A drive to raise $12,000 for relief work in Arlington County will be launched tomorrow evening with a "pep" dinner in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon, at which Arthur W. James, commissioner of the State Board of Public Welfare, will be the principal speaker.

The drive for collection of the funds will be started Monday morning by a corps of workers who will canvass the county under the leadership of Grover E. Payne, campaign chairman.

The citizens committee, of which Gilbert Hall is the chairman, is assisting the county welfare board to raise these funds and announces that there will be no overhead charges in carrying on the drive and that every dollar collected will be expended under the direction of the county welfare board for relief work in the county.

Chairman Grover E. Payne, in charge of the drive for funds to aid relief in Arlington County, announces the following list of additional workers representing their respective organizations:

Barcroft School and Civic League—T. J. Armstrong, A. M. Emmons, Mrs. J. T. Kirchner, H. C. Friewalt, Mrs. C. L. Chew, Mrs. W. W. House and Mrs. Milton D. Payne.

Lyon Village Woman's Club—Mrs. A. F. Coffman, Mrs. John A. Ford, Mrs. Joseph Haley, Mrs. T. B. Wyatt, Mrs. Clarence Croft, Mrs. M. N. McKnight, Mrs. Arthur Clark and Mrs. Charles Stanton.

Ashton Heights Woman's Club—Mrs. Charles Bardwell.

Lyon Park Citizens Association—C. I. Kephart, Arthur R. Scott, Mrs. W. T. Baker, Joseph C. Folsom, H. T. Marks and Dr. Norbert Melnick.

Glebewood Citizens Association—Mrs. C. W. Culpeper, Mrs. O. C. Funk and L. Herbert Martin.

Lyon Park Woman's Club—Mrs. Anna Coates, Mrs. Franklin Little, Mrs. N. Medley, Mrs. Bessie Johnson and Mrs. P. C. Dyer.

Ashton Heights Citizens Association—Thomas R. MacNem and H. L. Zile.

The special committee of the Arlington County Bar Association, of which Emery N. Hosmer is chairman, appointed to conduct a campaign looking for a reduction in taxes in Arlington County, will hold its first meeting this evening in the offices of Mr. Hosmer, opposite the county courthouse, at 8 o'clock.

The newly elected officers of Fellowship Council, No. 49, were installed at a meeting last night held in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon. The ceremonies were conducted by Mrs. E. B. Toler, of Richmond, deputy State councilor.

Those who were installed are: Councilor, Mrs. Mary Cook; associate councilor, Mrs. Elsie Crux; vice councilor, Mrs. Effie Havenner; associate vice councilor, Mrs. Grace Dover; recording secretary, Mrs. Mae Krigbaum; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor; financial secretary, J. E. Crux; treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth Smoot; guide, Mrs. Linda Cost; inside guard, Mrs. Mollie Basye; outside guard, M. S. Good. Trustee for a term of 18 months, Mrs. Mary Good.

The monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Patrick Henry School will be held in the school auditorium today at 8 p. m.

There will be a meeting of the Arlington County board tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock for the purpose of approving the semimonthly pay roll and any other matters that require the board's attention at this time.

CHARLES W. MORSE DIES AT BATH HOME

Career Ranged From Control of Millions to Cell in U. S. Prison.

Bath, Me., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—A career which had taken Charles W. Morse through the gilded gates of high finance and the barred doors of the Federal Penitentiary ended with the death of the 77-year-old capitalist here today.

He died of pneumonia after two of his three sons, who had been associated with him in many of the vicissitudes of his life, had returned to their homes, believing their father on the road to recovery.

An adept in the art of making money, Morse progressed in 20 years from a partnership in his father's shipping and ice business in this city to the head of corporate enterprises capitalized for more than $350,000,000.

Chief among them were the American Ice Co., a $60,000,000 combine, which virtually controlled the marketing of ice in New York City, and the Consolidated Steamship Co., under whose house flag sailed a large part of the passenger and freight vessels plying along the Atlantic Coast and Hudson River.

Goes Down in 1907.

From this pinnacle Morse slipped in the panic of 1907, losing control of his wide-flung business giants and seeing his personal fortune of $22,000,000 melt away.

Convicted of misapplication of funds of the National Bank of North America, an institution under his control, Morse was sentenced to fifteen years in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

He fought execution of the sentence, meanwhile operating in the stock market, with the result that when a cell door finally closed behind him he was reputed to have regained $7,500,000 of his fortune.

President Taft pardoned Morse at the end of two years, after doctors said ill health would cost him his life in six months.

Comes Back to Court.

The war revived the former shipping magnate's dreams of establishing a colossal combination, which should control the American merchant marine.

Operations in this direction brought him in court again in 1925, along with his three sons and eight other associates, all charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States and the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

The defendants were acquitted after litigation lasting many months. In the meantime, Morse had suffered a paralytic stroke, from which physicians said he would not recover, and his second wife, the former Mrs. Clemence Cowles Dodge, had died.

Morse retired to his home here to live the rest of his life remote from the public eye.

COL. F. R. SPARKS RITES.

Civil War Veteran, 91, Is Buried in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Frederick R. Sparks, Civil War veteran and for 50 years connected with the office of Surgeon General of the Army here, was buried in Arlington National Cemetery yesterday with military honors. He died at Norwood, Ohio, last Sunday at the age of 91.

Born in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1842, Col. Sparks served throughout the Civil War and in many important battles with the Sixty-fifth New York Infantry. At the close of the war he took a post with the Surgeon General, remaining in that office for 50 years. He retired in 1919. During his service with the surgeon general's office he collaborated on histories of the Civil War.

Col. Sparks was a member of the Union Veterans Legion and of the John A. Rawlings Post, G. A. R. He was prominent for many years in the latter organization.

OFFICIAL DEAD

Harris & Ewing.
DR. JOSEPH D. ROGERS.

DR. JANE SHERZER, EDUCATOR, IS DEAD

Was Second U. S. Woman to Receive Doctor's Degree From Berlin University.

Dr. Jane Sherzer, noted American educator and the second American woman to receive a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Berlin, died early last night at Washington Sanitarium after a three-month illness. She was 74 years old.

For more than a score of years connected with Oxford College, Ohio, Dr. Sherzer was twelve years president of that institution and for five years dean. She came to Washington twelve years ago and during most of her residence here has been connected with the Veterans' Bureau insurance division.

Dr. Sherzer, who received bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Michigan, where she attended, was organizer and first president of the Michigan branch here of the American Association of University Women.

After completing her course at the University of Michigan, Dr. Sherzer went abroad, spending a year at the University of Berlin, where she received her Ph. D. She is one of a very small group of women to earn this honor from the German university.

Dr. Sherzer lived at 2018 R street northwest with two sister, the Misses Anne R. and Effie Sherzer. A brief funeral service will be held today at the residence, with Dr. Albert MacCartney, pastor of the Church of the Covenant, officiating. The body will then be sent to Franklin, Ohio, birthplace of Dr. Sherzer, for burial.

Pinkney Inquest Is Postponed.

The inquest into the death of Thomas Pinkney, shot as he fled from a still near Forestville, Md., which was scheduled to have been held yesterday in Marlboro, was postponed for one week at the request of State's Attorney Alan Bowie. Mr. Bowie made this request so that he might continue his investigation.

DR. JOSEPH ROGERS, D. C. CORONER, DIES

Funeral Will Be Held at His Home Tomorrow; to Be Buried in Virginia.

Funeral services for Dr. Joseph D. Rogers, District coroner and head of Casualty Hospital, who died early yesterday after an illness of more than a year, will be held at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from his home, 1400 M street northwest. Burial will be in the family plot at Leesburg, Va.

For the past year Dr. Rogers had been ailing, but he insisted upon continuing his duties as coroner until a few days ago, when his condition became worse. Although he had to abandon his duties as coroner, nevertheless he remained in his office until Wednesday. He died early yesterday.

Dr. Rogers, who was prominent in medical circles before his appointment to the office of coroner, was born in 1880, in Hamilton, Va., the son of Samuel E. and Elizabeth Cochran Rogers. He came to Washington when he was 15 years old.

Studied at G. W. U.

He studied his profession in George Washington University Medical School and was graduated in 1902. He then began the practice of medicine.

He became president and medical director of the Stanton Park Accident and Receiving Hospital, but he closed this institution in 1925, at which time he became president and superintendent of Casualty Hospital.

About the same time, he was appointed deputy coroner, and, upon the retirement of Coroner J. Ramsay Nevitt, in November, 1931, he was named to succeed Dr. Nevitt.

Survived by Mother, 86.

Dr. Rogers was affiliated with many organizations, including the following: The American Medical Association, the Southern Medical Association, the District Medical Society, the Medical Society of Maryland, Virginia and the District, the Washington Medical and Surgical Society, the Racquet Club, the University Club, the Beaver Dam Country Club and the Loudoun Country Club. He was also a Mason, a Shriner, an Elk and was active in the affairs of the Board of Trade and the Washington Chamber of Commerce.

Surviving Dr. Rogers are his 86-year-old mother, two brothers, Samuel Hamilton Rogers and Howard Cochran Rogers, the latter of Hamilton, and two sisters, Miss Lula Thomas Rogers and Miss Elizabeth Megeath Rogers.

Auto Accident Is Basis Of Prince Georges Suit

Two damage suits, asking awards totaling $7,000, were filed in Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday against the White Transportation Co., of Baltimore.

Through Attorney M. Hampton Magruder, Paul L. Frederick asked damages of $5,000, while Samuel T. McGowan requested damages of $2,000. The suits arise out of an auto accident in Hyattsville, Md., recently.

NOW! EASE A SORE THROAT INSTANTLY

Feel Rawness, Irritation, Go At Once

These Pictures Tell You What To Do

Crush and Dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in Half a Glass of Water.
GARGLE Thoroughly—Throw Your Head Way Back, Allowing a Little to Trickle Down Your Throat.

Remember Only Medicine Helps A Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes.

Results are among the most extraordinary in medical science. On doctors' advice, millions are following this way . . . discarding old-time "washes" and "antiseptics." For it has been found that only medicine can help a sore throat.

Simple To Do. All you do is crush and dissolve three BAYER Aspirin Tablets in half a glass of water. Gargle with it twice—as pictured above. If you have any indication of a cold—before gargling take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets with a full glass of water. This is to combat any signs of cold that have gone into your system. Keep on taking if cold has a "hold." For Genuine Bayer Aspirin will not harm you. Your doctor will tell you, it does not depress the heart. Get a box of 12 or a bottle of 100 at any drug store.

Reduces Infection, Eases Pain Instantly. Gargling with Bayer Aspirin will do three things: Relieve soreness at once. Allay inflammation. AND—reduce infection; which is the important thing in fighting a sore throat.

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN—to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways. Results are quick and amazing.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin Tablets for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles. Watch this when you buy.

A FUTILE SESSION.

With fatal momentum Congress moves toward completion of a record of sterility. It seems to be in the grasp of a malign power that deranges the minds of legislators and paralyzes their ability to co-operate. The session is half over. Nothing has been done to relieve the country of any of its troubles, but much has been done to discourage business and arouse apprehension for the future.

The House passes an alleged farm relief measure which is grotesque in its unfairness to the general public. The measure is doomed to defeat, either by disagreement between the two houses or by veto, and thus valuable time is wasted.

The Senate is subjected to a filibuster which holds up legislation and exhibits that body at its worst. The right of unlimited speech is abused by senators to accomplish ends which their influence and ability could not encompass.

Legislation to balance the budget is practically impossible at this session. The Democratic majority in the House has no taxation plan, and seems to be waiting upon the fate of beer and farm relief legislation before tackling tax proposals. The Senate is tinkering with a new beer bill which will be obnoxious to the House and the President. The failure of both beer and farm relief legislation will leave the House face to face with a gigantic deficit and no plans for balancing the budget. Only a few days for action will remain. Therefore it is practically certain that the prime duty of Congress will be disregarded. An extra session will be necessary to provide revenue under the new administration.

If this were all, the debacle might be charged off to the confusion resulting from the election, which destroyed Republican initiative and so exhilarated the Democratic majority that it has had no stomach for work. But there are signs that inflation legislation is to be pressed at this session, notwithstanding the protests of level-headed Democrats throughout the country. Business is apprehensive, and dare not go forward. It fears that Congress will attempt to swell the debt by huge bond issues for public works in lieu of taxation to balance the budget. The sum of $300,000,000 has been suggested as an appropriate plunge into debt for nonproductive public works. Legislators who favor a bond issue hope by this means to escape responsibility for tax legislation, and are pretending that the budget would be balanced by shifting $300,000,000 to the shoulders of posterity.

Failure of the beer bill, failure of the farm relief bill, failure of taxation legislation, and chaotic conditions on March 4—this is the prospect that confronts the incoming administration. President-elect Roosevelt is facing a staggering task in organizing his administration and putting remedial legislation through Congress. Democrats as a rule are ready to support him, but upon their flanks hang the progressive and radical sharpshooters who will follow their schemes for rule or ruin.

Gov. Roosevelt paid tribute to the millions of Republicans who voted for him, and frequently stated that their co-operation would be necessary in case of his election. He spoke truly. Republicans in Congress may be the means of preventing the new administration from being swamped in radical inflationary legislation. Co-operation for the country's welfare was never more sorely needed.

PROHIBITION SCHISMS.

A wide gulf separates the Senate and House on the question of prohibition reform. The Senate is not disposed to accept the House's beer bill any more than it will follow the formula outlined by the House to effect repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The differences between the two bodies are so vital that a deadlock may be the result.

Before it is reported to the Senate the beer bill will have been entirely rewritten by the Senate judiciary subcommittee. The committee is not satisfied with a naive measure to legalize beer. It wants to rip a little hole in the Volstead act through which beer might trickle, and to arrange matters so that the Supreme Court could not upset the scheme without ripping a larger hole in that porous statute. Senator Blaine has already outlined a plan that is aimed at destruction of the enforcement law, regardless of the fact that the wets have not enough votes to repeal the eighteenth amendment.

Until the Senate beer measure is definitely written it is difficult to predict whether or not it will be acceptable to the House. But the gulf between the two houses seems to widen as consideration of beer legislation goes forward. It is quite probable that a deadlock will deprive President Hoover of the privilege of passing upon a beer measure.

Differences between the House and the Senate on the question of repealing the eighteenth amendment are still more far-reaching. Indications are that the Senate will approve the substitute amendment proposed by its judiciary committee, but there seems to be no possibility that it will be accepted by the House. This divergence of views is especially important because many Democrats in the Senate favor a new amendment that would give Congress concurrent power to prohibit the return of the saloon and full authority to protect the dry States. Unless there is a considerable change in sentiment, the Democrats may have difficulty in drafting an amendment that will be acceptable to both houses, even after March 4.

Hopes that the prohibition dilemma is near a solution are premature. The old question as to what shall take the place of prohibition bobs up every time the subject is considered. Dozens of new converts to the wet cause still cling to the belief that conditions might be remedied by constitutional jugglery without entirely wiping out the eighteenth amendment. A first-class row over the form that a repeal amendment shall take is in the making. It cuts across party lines and leaves both parties powerless to form a unified policy, in spite of their platform promises.

FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Treasury officials observed this year, as usual, the anniversary of the birth of Alexander Hamilton. A wreath was placed upon the statue of the first Secretary of the Treasury adorning the stately edifice which holds the Federal treasure. The occasion recalls the words of Daniel Webster, who said of Hamilton, "He smote the rock of national resources and abundant streams of revenue gushed forth." The incoming administration, seeking a new Secretary of the Treasury, might well wish for another such Moses; but a quotation from Hamilton himself also gives pause for thought in the present situation. Writing in the Federalist he said:

> The regulation of the more domestic policy of a state appears to me to hold out slender allurements to ambition. Commerce, finance, negotiation and war seem to comprehend all the objects which have charms for minds governed by that passion; and all the powers necessary to those objects ought, in the first instance, to be lodged in the national depositary. The administration of private justice between the citizens of the same State, the supervision of agriculture and of other concerns of a similar nature, all those things, in short, which are proper to be provided for by local legislation, can never be desirable cares of a general administration.

What would Hamilton think of the clamor that is heard today demanding that every conceivable kind of responsibility be transferred from the States to the Federal Government? The national administration is to be burdened not only with the financial and welfare woes of the 48 States, but is now asked to embark upon direct subsidies for agricultural production and direct financial doles. The inauguration of such a wide departure from the governmental plans of the fathers is to assume ever-increasing burdens for the Federal Treasury of which no one can foretell the end.

NO PEACE IN SIGHT.

Reports of peace negotiations between Chinese and Japanese military leaders at Shanhaikwan are probably without significance. Japan has frequently talked peace while pushing her troops further into Chinese territory. The civil government of Japan is anxious to have the world believe that its intentions are pacific, in spite of the belligerence of the independent military department. Reports of peace conferences are supposed to have a soothing effect upon the League of Nations. They make it easier for Japan to preserve the fiction that her military forces are acting in self-defense against bloodthirsty Chinese bandits.

China, too, is ever ready to take part in a peace conference. Even though she has lost hope of saving her territory from invasion through the conference method, China's policy is to give Japan no excuse for continuing her invasion. China's case rests on world opinion. She is extremely diligent in avoiding any event which might put the Nanking government in a disadvantageous position before the League Assembly. For this reason China may be expected to go through the motions of negotiating with the invaders every time such an opportunity is presented.

Local peace talks, however, have almost no connection with the fundamental issue between the two nations. China has ceased to consider local incidents. Her concern is for the preservation of China as a whole. Japan would like to conclude local agreements for preservation of the status quo. But China will not be appeased until her territory is evacuated. Since Japan is determined to hold Manchuria and is apparently set upon the control of Jehol, there is no prospect of a solution in sight.

The Chinese still have some hope that the League of Nations will take decisive action, but that hope is growing dimmer. If the League evades the issue, as it is expected to do, the conflict in China may go on for years. Even though they are not prepared to meet Japan on the battlefield, the Chinese have remarkable powers of resistance. They can annoy Japan with economic boycotts, with guerrilla warfare and continued appeals to world opinion. It is probable that the Far East has settled down to an endurance contest between Japanese militarism and Chinese resistance.

HOW TO ENJOY LEISURE.

Butler University at Indianapolis inaugurates next month a schedule of classes to give instruction in the utilization of leisure. It is not that the university foresees the imminence of the extremes of idle time predicted by some of the newer schemes for revolutionizing human activities, but it is believed that students can learn to make better use of the hours already at their disposal for recreation or improvement of the mind.

The new courses will be given during the evening hours so that they can be attended by those who are employed or occupied with daytime studies. In preparing individuals to occupy their spare time to advantage avocations and hobbies will be encouraged. Special instruction will be provided in astronomy, gardening, birds, photography, politics, appreciation of art, after-dinner speaking, and other lines as the new departure develops.

As shorter working hours inevitably arrive Dean Albert E. Bailey, who has arranged the course, believes that loafing will become a bore unless people give some attention to utilizing their free time. "The world is full of things to enjoy," says the dean, "new sciences to pursue, new books and plays to understand and appreciate, new theories of government and social organization, new sports, strange countries and peoples to explore through books, old arts and new ones to comprehend and practice—with all these nobody need get stale even if he has a hundred years of leisure."

"We should like to have our Government debts all settled, although it is probable that we could better afford to lose them than our debtors could afford not to pay them."—Calvin Coolidge.

Old-fashioned farm wives who stick to the hen will get more calico than those who run after domestic allotment rainbows.

It's cruel of M. Laval to let down Senator Borah, after the latter graciously granted him that famous audience.

A RUINOUS POLICY

From the Chicago Daily Tribune.

The statistics on payments to veterans are literally staggering. They reveal a blindness to consequences in Congress and the administration which no past prosperity can condone and no hope of national restoration can tolerate.

The enormity of our policy is emphasized by comparison with what other nations have done for their veterans. The United States, which had 360,000 men killed and wounded in the late war, is now making annual payments to veterans 20 per cent more than the aggregate of payments of Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Canada, which had a combined casualty record of 16,500,000 men.

The combined cost of veteran payments of Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Canada was slightly over $800,000,000. That of the United States was more than a billion dollars. This vast sum paid by the American people is 25 per cent of our Federal expenditure, and comes to 25 per cent of every dollar of taxes taken from our people by the Federal Government.

This crushing burden has been built up without consideration by the public or their representatives. It has been imposed gradually but swiftly by repeated legislation, under the influence of the gratitude we all feel for the service and sacrifice of our soldiers. That has been a commendable emotion, which is felt today, but it has been exploited by organized and heedless pressure. It must be brought within the limits of reason or it will destroy the welfare of the Nation and make its recovery impossible.

The chief evil is the broadening of the base of relief to include payments for disabilities not in any way connected with war service. A repeal of this wrong policy and the proper confinement of relief to disabilities ascribable to service would cut our expenditures in this field nearly a half. It would lift an enormous burden from the back of the Nation without withdrawing generous aid for every veteran disabled by service. No one would deprive any such veteran of proper aid. But the Nation can not continue to bear the growing burden of our present preposterous policy.

Our policy, therefore, is demoralizing, unjust and destructive in a degree which even the enormous sum it exacts does not fully illustrate. It involves far more than money. It means the establishment of a system destructive not only of the material welfare, but the moral character of the Nation. It means the creation of a political power fortified by public plunder whose demands will be insatiable.

The self-respect and Americanism of the majority of service men, we believe, will oppose such an abuse of patriotism, and the Nation at large will not submit to it. Congress should deal with it without delay or evasion.

To the Rescue!

Not very complimentary to New York bankers, the suggestion at the Senate hearing that Kreuger was crazy when he got those big loans.

Our West Coast visitor, making such adoo about 2 per cent mortgages with 100 years for amortization, Federal guarantee of bank deposits and inflation, is enough to call for an extra guard around his erstwhile haunts at the United States Treasury.

The successful sponsor who got dairy products on the allotment pension list was frank enough to admit that it would add 4 cents a pound to the price of butter and 1 cent to milk; but, of course, this is not a sales tax.

When is a sales tax not a sales tax? When it takes a billion from the masses, not for the Federal Treasury, but for favored classes.

PURPOSE.

How can they think that life is vain?
Who knows the secrets of the fates?
Or what lies just beyond the gates
Which open to the morning? Loss and gain

To present sight are never plain.
Perhaps an urgent need awaits
For him who now in dreadful straits
Suffers both poverty and pain.

He may beyond disaster's rim
Discover ere his life is through
A purpose God has kept for him
Which only he could rightly do.
Men live for something Time alone
In its peculiar way makes known.

The First Step in Achieving Goodness Is to Be Ashamed of Rottenness

By ROBERT QUILLEN

WHEN Athens was the chief jewel of the glory that was Greece, it was not a flawless city inhabited only by genius.

Its slaves outnumbered its freemen, and the brilliant men whose genius still dominates the arts of civilization were a baker's dozen in a multitude.

The majority, then as now, was composed of onlookers who contributed nothing but criticism and applause.

That state of affairs has never changed.

The ordinary American, who regards his race as the favorite instrument of Providence, says to his neighbor: "Despite our present setback, this is the greatest civilization the world has ever known. We have advanced farther than any other people in history."

In what particular is our civilization so great, and who is it that has advanced so far?

The greatness, you will say, is self-evident. Look at our skyscrapers, our intricate machines, our radios, cinemas, telephones, automobiles. See the evidence of our enormous wealth. We are a great people.

That, with all due respect, is hooey.

How many of our millions could design a skyscraper, build a radio or a telephone or an automobile? How many know the laws that are harnessed to make a machine fly? How many could so much as transform iron ore into steel?

A few mechanics know these things and most of them are specialists who insert bolt No. 32 and are helpless in another department. Destroy our civilization and the mechanics with it and who could rebuild what we have? Could you do it?

We are a race of button pushers. Is pushing a button proof of greatness? In what age were men incapable of doing that?

As to our wealth, it is the property of the few. And men in all ages have accumulated wealth by appropriating that created by another's toil.

The merit of a civilization is measured by the opportunity and security it affords every citizen, by its justice and compassion, by its laws and the respect they are given, by its control of evil and its scorn of dishonor.

America needs less ego and more truth. The first essential to conversion, as the old-fashioned evangelist said, is a conviction of sin. Shame is the best of teachers, and America will not become what it should be until its people are heartily ashamed of what it is.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Take It or Leave It.

Brooklyn Eagle.

In framing a resolution for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment a subcommittee of the Senate has inserted a section that would leave it within the power of Congress to "regulate or prohibit" drinking on the premises where liquor is sold. The Senate remains about half Republican; the Republican platform made much of intention to prevent the return of the saloon. The draft now published furnishes a resolution that would cover this feature of Republican promises. The draft may be the nearest thing to straight repeal that would have any chance of passage in the remainder of the present Congress.

Its chance would be greater but that the advocates of unadulterated repeal—the people who take their repeal straight—may vote against it as lacking in sufficient kick. If they do this they will act in the expectation that a special session of the next Congress will vote repeal in more acceptable terms.

Just to Defeat Economy.

Topeka Capital.

It is fair to assume that either or any President would be just to the various branches of the Government in a rearrangement of the many bureaus. Mr. Hoover in his program cut some 80 organizations down to 9 in number. His successor was trained in Government service in the Department of the Navy, but whether he may be biased in favor of the military services can be determined only when he submits a plan of general reorganization, if he does so. Few persons meantime will question President Hoover's frankly expressed judgment that the switch that has occurred in plans of reorganization from immediate action to action later is merely just another move to defeat any real economy which cuts into congressional patronage.

Blankety-Blank.

Boston Globe.

Now for the fun of filling out the income tax blanks—this year's best joke.

Bread Upon the Waters.

Louisville Herald-Post.

Charity never seems sweeter than when you enter it in the exemptions column on an income tax return.

Protests Against Tax.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

It is plain that Democratic leaders erred grievously in proposing an increase of income tax rates as the best means of balancing an unbalanced budget. The chorus of protest which greeted that announcement and the abrupt withdrawal of the proposal have settled the issue, apparently in a final manner. After a rather brilliant use of publicity in their campaign, it is not easy to see why they should have suggested higher levies on incomes just when taxpayers were receiving their income tax blanks, a deadly reminder of the enormous increases already made.

The Political Soup Line.

Houston Post.

When Cleveland entered the White House for his second term he was besieged by job-hunters in such great numbers that he was brought to the verge of physical collapse. A larger percentage of Government employes are under civil service now, but even so, Mr. Roosevelt faces an experience almost as severe as that undergone by Cleveland. At any time, a Government job has a powerful appeal to many people. In these times of depression, its appeal is widened many times.

While the patronage power may be satisfying, it brings with it responsibilities and dangers, too. For many of those who must inevitably be denied appointments may become enemies of the administration.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

France Loses Prestige and Lays It to German Propaganda—Only Herself to Blame.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Premier Herriot expresses the fear that the cordial relationship he labored so diligently to build up between France and Great Britain may be forfeited in the present differences over international policies. This is but one more indication that French statesmen realize their national prestige is slipping. The refusal of the deputies to follow London in the matter of the American war debts has been a telling blow to French prestige.

These developments tend to disturb the erstwhile feeling of security in France and to intensify French nationalism. With her great army and new fortifications and with Germany impotent, France had little to fear. Now, with Germany headed once more toward equality of armament, with an unfavorable financial situation in France and the danger of an isolated position among world powers, French statesmen and newspapers are inclined to view developments abroad with some uneasiness. They speak of a misunderstanding of French motives.

The present feeling in America is even laid to German propaganda, and national organizations have urged counter propaganda as a national policy. Senator Henri Berenger remarks that "France has friends abroad, but we ignore them and discourage them by our indifference and our inertia." The effect of a well-directed campaign to arouse sympathies or antipathies is at times influential, but the supposition that the present views held in this county with regard to France are due to German propaganda, and that they can be reversed by French propaganda, is too naive to be taken seriously.

American sympathies are not wholly with any one nation or group of nations, and certainly the national estimate of one nation is not determined by what is said of it by another. Whatever unfavorable feelings there may be in this countrty today with regard to France are due solely to that nation's own action. The American attitude toward the French default is not one of fierce resentment, in my opinion, but rather regret that the saner view of the cabinet was overruled in the chamber, a feeling that the policy adopted was one which would injure France more than the United States. When the eventual settlement is made France will learn that what is here held to be an ill-considered step will not result in any deep or lasting estrangement of American sympathy.

J. F. OGDEN.

Waste of Resources—Places Hope in Roosevelt Plan to Put Every Acre to Work.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No subject brought to public attention is of such moment as a national system of reforestation.

We are at this time suffering very materially from forest famine attested by the fact that we have created the greatest demand for newsprint of any country in the world and are forced to import large quantities of pulp wood to supply that demand while ten million men are begging for jobs.

In 1931, America drew from her veins 596,000,000 barrels of crude oil. Russia, three times as large and three times as rich in natural resources, came second with only 120,000,000 barrels. Venezuela third, with 88,000,000. Roumania fourth, with 36,000,000 barrels. The world runs on oil and now is the time for America to wake up to the vital question of natural resource conservation.

If we continue our waste of natural resources and some day the world should again become aflame with war, with a timber and oil famine to face, the loss and suffering to the American people would be too horrifying to contemplate.

If President Roosevelt carries forward his announced policy of putting every acre of land to work for which it is best adapted, depression will gradually disappear and no longer will America be afflicted with 60,000,000 hungry people. J. H. BREWER.

Calvin Coolidge's Mother a Descendant of Josiah Franklin, Father of the Philosopher.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The passing of Calvin Coolidge is one of the greatest losses the country has sustained this past year.

Although there were only farmers in his genealogical line on his father's side, Calvin Coolidge was descended from Benjamin Franklin on his mother's side, according to a prominent biographer. Vernon B. Hampton points out in "Religious Background of the White House" that Coolidge's mother, Victoria Josephine Moor, was the daughter of Hiram D. Moor and Abigail Franklin, and that Abigail Franklin, the President's grandmother, was lineally descended from Josiah Franklin, the father of Benjamin. Abigail Franklin was of the fifth generation and in direct line from James Franklin, son of Josiah.

This makes clear the remark made to me by a member of the Harvard Club, of New York, one time. He said: "Mr. Coolidge represents the original stock from which our Nation has sprung. In him we find embodied those marks of strength which have been indicative of the American Republic at its source."

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

DEAR MISS PIERCE: It may be that my experience will interest other readers. If so, I shall be happy to have contributed to your column, which I read and enjoy day by day.

Cold feet (it may sound inelegant, but it's the truth) have been the bane of my existence. Every winter for the past few years I have wanted to sleep, a la Rip Van Winkle, since I can not afford to fly to Florida. It's been such torture the past few weeks that I had to see a physician; I felt so subnormal, couldn't sleep, &c.

He asked me what I ate and when I failed to mention lots of butter, cream, rich salad dressings, oils, milk and similar fuel foods, he said, "There you are, no fuel; how do you expect to keep any warmth in your body?" He claims that the body needs more nourishing foods during the winter than it does during the summer. He said, too, that what you eat and your blood supply, your circulation, your skin, all are "blood relatives." Women have been dieting so drastically, and eliminating the heavier foods to such an extent, whether they are fat or out of fear of getting fat, that the body burns up its fuel too quickly and has no surplus. That's why women are thin to the point of emaciation, nervous, have cold feet and dry skins and a dozen different (or I should say similar) ailments.

Of course he added that we don't get enough exercise in the winter, that we huddle indoors (I remember reading just that phrase in your column), and that even if we do walk outdoors, women (and the deprecatory tone he used when he said "women") will wear high-heeled, tight shoes, so that the feet don't get enough real freedom and exercise, and you encase hands in tight gloves, &c.

He finished with "go home, eat some nourishing food, add butter to your vegetables, sweet cream to your fruits and cereals, don't be afraid to eat more, and don't be afraid to exercise more. If you bend from the waist ten times and arch backward ten times your feet will be warmer. (Imagine, Miss Pierce). Believe it or not, head stands and hand stands are good for the feet. Gets the blood busy. Before going to bed, massage with alcohol rub will help. He even advised a hot-water bag to warm the feet and induce sleep, but said to try to avoid forming the habit and gradually get them warm naturally.

In three weeks I've noticed a marked improvement. So—here's the hint for your column, if you wish.

MRS. J. C. HARRINGTON.

I want to thank Mrs. Harrington for her splendid letter and its hints, and hope with her that her experience will help other readers. In fact, I'm sure it will.

Those of you who are suffering from dry skins, my bulletin on the subject, outlining local treatment, will be sent to you on receipt of self-addressed, stamped envelope.

How Coughs and Colds Yield to Creosote

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

INSTEAD of the Shuberts' production of Franz Lehar's operetta, "The Land of Smiles," in which Charles Hackett, the eminent American tenor, was expected to be heard in the leading role, it now appears that the National Theater will have a dark half-week, beginning Monday, January 23, followed by a three-day engagement of one of the stage's most distinguished actors.

Late yesterday, word was received by Panjandrum Cochran of the National of the cancellation of "The Land of Smiles" for the week of January 23 and the substitution therefor, but only on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, January 26, 27 and 28, of Walter Hampden in "Caponsacchi" and "Hamlet."

"Caponsacchi" will chiefly engage Mr. Hampden's interest during his curtailed Washington engagement. This dramatization by Arthur Goodrich of Robert Browning's monumental poetic narrative, "The Ring and the Book," will be presented at every evening performance, with "Hamlet" reserved for the single matinee performance on Saturday afternoon.

Unless its future bookings are so ironclad that such an arrangement is impossible—and no booking these days seems to be quite that steel-riveted—it occurs to this column that it would be a pious undertaking on the management's part to see at once if Noel Coward, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne can not be held over those extra three days at the National in Mr. Coward's new comedy, "Design for Living," scheduled to open on E street Monday night.

This is a thought that was suggested by the queues trailing away from the box-office windows all day yesterday, evidently composed of discriminating theatergoers who have no intention of letting "Design for Living" get away without their having seen it.

You would have thought the lamented Flo Ziegfeld had come back to earth and was bringing in a new show for a Washington premiere!

A paragraph that was "bitten off" to make yesterday's column fit in its allotted space will do with a bit of elaboration.

It pertained vaguely to the persistent rumors that Irving Thalberg is about to step down from a key position among Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production chiefs, and started out to speculate mildly upon the effect Walter Wanger's appointment to the M-G-M forces, in the capacity of associate producer, would have upon these rumors.

Conjecture has been running practically rife about Mr. Wanger's future ever since he and Paramount came to the parting of the ways—and means—indications fluctuating between a possible return to Paramount and an affiliation with RKO, with whom he has recently been exchanging postcards.

The definite announcement that Mr. Wanger will be with M-G-M lends some color to the insistence of a few who ought to be in a position to guess with fair accuracy that Mr. Thalberg has been on his way out for a long time now and the only thing that has delayed his departure before this has been the necessity of architecturing a suitably handsome exit for him to pass through, outward bound!

Incidentally, if you glue your ear to the subterranean sources of rumor, or get it all tangled up in the grapevine, you will hear, sooner or later, that the trouble with Mr. Thalberg is not so much his heart as that the cost of his pictures has given the M-G-M bankers a pain in theirs!

Whosever heart it is that misses a beat now and again, I'll hazard the prediction, even at these prices, that if Irving Thalberg does retire from M-G-M production for any reason whatsoever, that company will not again corral five out of the "ten best pictures of the year"—any year.

And reverting momentarily to next week's engagement of "Design for Living," at the National, if you are habitually on the theater's free list—if any—it will exceedingly behoove you to scurry around and buy yourself a pasteboard at one of Mr. Russell Thomas' ticket wickets, because during this engagement (and this one is right out of the feed box) there ain't going to be no free list!

Another item that was crowded out yesterday observed that:

One addicted to particularization might easily put his finger upon several devotees of the theater in Washington who will be thrilled by the announcement that Clifford Brooke has received a letter from Ona Munson, now in Mexico City, proclaiming her intention of becoming a student at the new Clifford Brooke Academy of Dramatic Art, which opens next Monday in its new classrooms at 1000 Connecticut avenue.

Miss Munson writes that she derived so much benefit in the furtherance of her stage ambitions from her last summer's association with Mr. Brooke as a member of the National Theater Players that she is keen to resume this aid to the pursuit of her career. She plans to arrive from Mexico City in time to begin her studies at the start of the school's first term, January 16.

When I chanced to look up and saw a young fellow crouching to get through the door that leads from the hall into the palatial suite, with its period furniture and Tiffany fixtures, occupied by the dramatic department—as a matter of fact, a good deal of it is not so much period furniture as it is exclamation point Grand Rapids, if you are going to get nasty about it—yesterday afternoon, I began to think I had Jem!

But it turned out to be Master Henry Mullins, just making a friendly call, so I pushed the old eyes back in their sockets, swallowed a couple of times to get my heart down where it belonged again and smiled wanly in welcome.

I wouldn't be so sure about the smile, beyond an honest intention to have the corners of the mouth curve upward slightly, because Henry inspires awe rather than amusement.

Henry, you will recall, paid Washington a visit about a year ago when he was just a little fellow, only 7 feet 7 inches in height and 270, or so, pounds in weight. He's grown clear up to here since then, stands 7 feet 9 inches, instead of 7, and weighs 280 stripped.

The lad is doing a little systematic gym work and in time will probably build himself up into quite a broth of a boy. He isn't 20 yet and still has a reasonable expectation of a few more inches of growth in all directions, including up as well as out!

Henry, you must remember, first came to notice when Carter Barron picked him up—well, not that literally—and hired a tentmaker to build him a doorman's uniform when he was managing the biggest Loew house in Atlanta.

Henry is now featured with Bell & Fields in "Fighting for Fun," a vaudeville act that opens at the Hippodrome in Baltimore today. They are newly back from a tour to the Coast and Henry and Tommy Bell were just over from the Monumental City making a few social calls yesterday.

I think that what really happened was that Henry fell down over in Baltimore and, upon discovering his head was across the District Line, decided on the spur of the moment to bring the rest of him on over!

This fellow Charles Laughton, who makes Nero such a callous guy that he sits and munches grapes while the gladiators, the Amazons, the pygmies and the rest of them in the Circus Maximus "games" slay each other playfully and bloodily in "The Sign of the Cross," at the National, isn't such a tough egg as you might think!

Mr. Laughton, I am told, while playing in the late Edgar Wallace's "On the Spot," in London, heard a good deal about "Scarface" Al Capone and his carbinieri out in Chicago. "On the Spot" was that kind of play. Signor Capone and his Gold Coast artillery made a deep and lasting impression upon the Laughton consciousness.

So a year or two later, when Mr. Laughton was touring this country in "Payment Deferred," and the play was booked into Chicago, he still entertained vivid notions of Signor Capone's lust for vengeance against all who might ever have offered him affront. Disturbed by a Casper Milquetoast conscience, Mr. Laughton, upon learning of the Chicago booking, sat himself down forthwith and wrote his advance agent a 500-word telegram admonishing him not to let a word leak into print about his ever having appeared in "On the Spot" on the London stage. Mr. Capone might be offended!

And now look at the bluff he is throwing, twiddling that fidicula while Rome is in flames at his feet!

A reminder may not be amiss that John Masefield, poet laureate of England speaks at the National this afternoon and that tomorrow morning, also at the National, the Children's Theater Company from New York will present "The Sleeping Beauty."

Heed also should be paid the fact that the doors at Loew's Fox open today at 10:15 a. m., with the first showing of the feature at 10:30, that "They Just Had to Get Married" continues through today at the Rialto, "Laughter in Hell" opening Saturday, and that "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" continues a second week at the Metropolitan.

This, you will be happy to learn, closes right now.

A cartoonist's impression of Barbara Stanwyck, as Megan Davis, the young American, and Nils Asther, as Gen. Yen Tso-Chong, in Columbia Pictures' sumptuous filmization of Mrs. Grace Zaring Stone's novel of "The Bitter Tea of General Yen," opening today at RKO-Keith's.

$2,000 Damages Sought After Auto Hits House

An award of $2,000 for damages done to the George Washington House in Bladensburg when it was struck by an automobile last fall was asked in a suit filed in Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday by Maude J. Gafford against Robert A. Humphries.

In October of last year, according to the suit filed through Attorney J. Wilson Ryon and Albert R. Hassall, a car driven by Humphries struck the front of the house, knocking down the porch.

FRIDAY JANUARY 13, 1933 SPORTS

MARYLAND U. FIVE CHECKS DUKE'S STREAK, 30-28

This Morning with Shirley L. Povich

APPARENTLY the colleges can't take it. The last three days have developed three separate instances of curtailment of sports programs which, now that the lead has been taken by no less ranking an institution than Cornell, will probably become general among the Nation's colleges.

Cornell announced the abandonment of all intercollegiate sports with the exception of basket ball for the remainder of the school year. Catholic University last night made a similar announcement hard on the heels of the revelation that the famous Poughkeepsie Regatta would not be held next summer for the first time in 38 years as a result of financial straits.

None but the colleges themselves are responsible for the high cost of college athletics. The handwriting that has been on the economic wall for the past three years was not discernible to the men who manage college athletics, apparently. Colleges have been paying the same high guarantees and the same high salaries in the old-fashioned way despite the economic readjustment of the entire country and now retrenchment to a lot of them means that they must fold up their intercollegiate programs.

Guarantee Has Been Underlying Evil.

The guarantee has been the underlying evil of college athletics for several years in the belief of this department, which has seen college athletics transformed into a business of bargaining for gate attractions necessary to maintain high salaries for coaching staffs and interest payments on stadium bonds.

Especially in football has the guarantee evil put the pressure on college athletics. Teams acknowledged as gate attractions have overlooked natural rivalries to go shopping about for the largest guarantees. As a result, coaching and training expenses have been stepped up each season and when the time came that that particular team suffered a disastrous season and no longer was able to command a guarantee necessary for the maintainment of its athletics in the luxury to which they have become accustomed, entire sports programs were hit hard and in some cases wiped out entirely.

Midwestern College Is One Case.

In a Midwestern college there was the case several years ago of a sensational football team which was drawing crowds far too large for its antiquated stadium, seating a mere 25,000. With no endowment or other ready money to build a more modern field, the athletic department "sold" a contractor on the plan to erect a bigger stadium and take his pay from the college's share of the first money that came through the gate.

The contractor, noting the capacity crowds, was easily convinced and set up a stadium at a cost of $300,000 to himself. The payments were to begin the next fall. Then came the crash. The team was off to a bad start. The stock market plunged to a new low. The crowds of 25,000 who used to turn out for the games dwindled to a mere 10,000 lost in the vast confines of the huge edifice. There was no ready money to pay guarantees to visiting attractions, and the contractor is now threatening to throw the college into receivership.

Failed to Retrench Two Years Ago.

Catholic University, of course, does not come within the class that is obliged to pay large guarantees or maintain an expensive athletic staff. The depression at C. U. is the natural economic reaction of the entire country. But with C. U. forced to wipe out its spring and winter sports program with the exception of basket ball, consider the cases of those larger colleges with highly paid retinues of coaches, trainers and camp followers, and stadium bonds that demand interest payment.

Until last season there was no inclination to reduce admission fees, whereas the remainder of the country began to retrench two years before. It seems to this department that the college sports bubble burst a couple of years before the colleges were able to detect the fact. Of course, hindsight is vastly better than foresight, but, as the saying goes the fact remains.

Caliente Golf Lead Held by Mangrum

Texan Adds a 72 for 141 Total to Top Paul Runyon.

Hambrick Third at Halfway Mark in $7,500 Tourney.

By WILLIAM WARNE.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Ray Mangrum, steadying after a bad seven on the first hole, a par-five, finished the second round of the $7,500 Agua Caliente open golf tourney today with a card of 72, even par, for a two-day total of 141 and a lead of two strokes over the field.

While the 22-year-old professional from Waco, Tex., was making that display of grit, two other youngsters put the veterans in eclipse. Paul Runyon, 24, from White Plains, N. Y., matched Mangrum's fine first day score of 69 on his second round and jumped into second place with 143. A stroke behind him with 144 came Archie Hambrick, 23-year-old Zanesville, Ohio, professional.

None of Old Guard Threatening.

At the halfway mark none of the old guard appeared in particularly threatening positions. Leo Diegel, Agua Caliente pro; Craig Wood, the Deal, N. J., giant, and Tony Manero, of Greenwich, Conn., were tied in the fourth position with cards of 146, 5 strokes behind the leader.

The predictions which were made so freely that Mangrum would crack, came close to fulfillment. From the first tee he made a good drive, but his second shot fell into a trap. His third carried over the green, and his fourth barely put him on. He then took 3 putts to get down.

The youngster recovered his composure, however, and made a birdie 2 on the 167-yard third hole by sinking a 20-foot putt. He got another birdie on the sixth to round the turn all even with par. The last nine he played, hole by hole, in perfect figures.

Runyon Goes Out In 32 Strokes.

Runyon provided the fireworks by shooting his 69. He played the out nine in 32 strokes, 4 under par, a feat which never was accomplished before. An eagle 3 on the first hole and 3 birdies, one made by sinking a 25-foot putt and the others by great approach shots, turned the trick.

Fay Coleman, Los Angeles professional, joined the Hole-in-One Club on the third tee. The ball, hit dead for the pin on the 167-yard hole, hit on the apron of the green and trickled into the cup. He finished, however, with a 76 and a two-day total of 154, far back in the ruck.

Fred Morrison, the defending champion, from Pasadena, Calif., turned in a 76 today, 1 stroke more than he took yesterday while playing in the wind.

Horton Smith slipped from a stroke under par yesterday to a 76, 4 over, today, when his irons quit working. Harry Cooper was another of the veterans wro dropped back, adding 75 to his first-day 74, for a total of 149. MacDonald Smith found many of the greens out of reach of his brassie and took a 77 for a total of 152, with 31 players in front of him.

THE LEADERS.

141—Ray Mangrum, Los Angeles.
143—Paul Runyon, New York.
144—Archie Hambrick, Zanesville, Ohio.

TECH MEETS CENTRAL IN SERIES

Crown May Hinge on Clash Today; Eastern vs. Western.

AN AIR of confidence pervaded the camps of Central and Tech yesterday afternoon as the teams tapered off their preparations for today's crucial battle in the interhigh series. The two are undefeated, although the winning streak of each consists of a solitary series game, and the victor naturally will assume the lead in the scramble for the crown now adorning the feverish brow of Eastern. Central is the public choice.

A so-called contest involving Eastern and Western is listed as a preliminary. Eastern, lodged in second place, is a lead-heavy favorite to completely stop the red-jerseyed Westerners, who at the moment are wallowing in the mire of last place.

"We look good enough to hold Tech to a 20-point victory tomorrow," said Central's coach, Bert Coggins, his face beaming with pleasure as Ollie Tipton missed his fifth consecutive pot shot. "Yes, sir, the team is in fine fettle, and unless Tech springs a surprise I think 20 points is the most they can win by."

Football Players Pose As Tech.

Out on the floor a bunch of football players, disguised in basket ball suits, were using the zone defense, such as Tech will use today to ward off the short passing attack of the first team. Team No. 2 didn't appear to be particularly pleased with its practice role. They stood and waved their hands at opponents racing in to the basket, looking for all the world like a henpecked husband waving to his mother-in-law arriving for a six months' visit.

The first team put in a strenuous afternoon drilling on plays that are calculated to throw the Maroon off guard enough to net another 50-point victory. Speaking of decisive margins, it seems that the team had a meeting the other afternoon and adopted a resolution that only victories of 50 points or more will count in the school series. Messrs. Nau, Shore, Moulton, Burke and Tipton were appointed a committee to look after this matter.

No less certain of the outcome was Artie Boyd as he directed the Tech team. Confidence was secreted all over the gym.

"I am confident we will lose by at least 20 points," said Boyd. "Oh, yes, at least 20. I always was conservative," he added in a confidential tone.

With Reds Daly at center, Waverly Wheeler and Bernie Reichhardt at forwards, Jimmy Reed and "Little Knocky" Thomas at guards, Tech can hardly hope to do better than beat Central by more than 6 or 7 points. Put the matter up to the players (and after all who is playing this game?) and they'll tell you Tech is going to win. Boyd merely hopes for a respectable score

Hardell Bemoans Lack of Copyright.

Seated on the bench nearby sat Hap Hardell, Tech's football coach, gnashing his teeth as Boyd stole his own patented sob story about the punk teams turned out at the school.

Eastern, of course, expects little trouble from Western, but like a fireman, Coach Mike Kelley is coming prepared for fireworks. Kelley hit upon a new combination in the Roosevelt fray last week and he plans to use it again today. It will be Al Waters, center, Tommy Nolan and Harry Bassin, guards, Jack Bayliss and Joe Perruso, guards.

Jimmy Corcoran, Bieri, Brennan, MacPherson and Forney, of Western, have evidenced signs of improvement thus far, but a workable combination has not been found by Coach Cliff Moore.

Londos Spins Judson to Triumph

5,000 See Champion End Popular Foe in 44 Mins.

Jones Wins Semifinal Trophy; Dusek in Draw Battle.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

WITH Umpire Cyclone Burns running swell interference, Jim Londos, rassling's time-table champion, scored a touchdown over Frank Judson, reformed Harvard wrestling coach, last night at the Washington Auditorium in the standard time of 44 minutes before a great crowd of 5,000 fans—the largest gathering of believers to see an indoor match since Londos scaled Mount Pinetzki a year ago.

There was probably more wrestling in this match than has been divulged in two months of growling at the old fortress of foul play. There wasn't an eye-gouge in a carload of holds and the leers and snorts were, like the smooth stretches on Eleventh street, few and far between.

The two boys confined their artistry to such old and established mediums of mayhem as wrist-locks, headlocks, body locks and goldie-locks.

Judson Works His Wrist Lock.

There was a great deal of lying around and bending shins, with the agony about evenly divided, with possibly a shade in Judson's favor. Judson had his customary wrist-lock working overtime, exerting enough pressure on it at times to turn the dangling hand of the champion a pasty white, and showed a new hold in a sort of body-scissors and wrist-lock combined. He also secured several good standing splits, a hold that seems to excite the customers despite the fact that in the entire history of the mat game no one has ever been thrown with it.

Londos spent most of his time breaking wrist-locks. For exercise the boys would occasionally get up and chase Umpire Burns around the ring.

The ending started when Jim backed whatzis name up in a corner, lifted him and dumped him easily. He did it again, then again. As he started his fourth airplane spin, Londos' wrist was grabbed and he went down with the usual loose arm grabbing at the cigar smoke. He broke the hold easily, dumped Judson four more times and Dr. Burns was called upon to count up to three, which he did without any prompting at all.

Paul Jones won his first leg on the Wallace Beery Cup, emblematic of the semifinal championship, by beating a big good-natured Irishman named Pat McSomething in 24 minutes.

Later in the night Jones appeared at the ringside, shockingly clean, and announced that he had put the trophy under lock and key, and implied by his manner that he did not quite trust his contemporaries.

"What are you going to do with it?" we shouted in one of Jones' tangled ears.

"Fill it fulla beer, what else?" said Mister Jones, who is a very elemental person, but when last seen Mister Jones was making gutteral love to a lady spectator who had rooted for him, and the chances of the cup's being sent home to mamma were growing remote.

Two 30-minute draws of more than customary vigor were presented by Messrs. Dusek and Clinstock and Messrs. Coleman and Cox.

Babe Caddock and Tiger Nelson were waltzing nicely in the first exhibition of the night, while Benny Bortnick hummed "The Blue Danube," when suddenly Mister Nelson tripped and was counted out when Mister Caddock fell on top of him.

Estis-Jones Draw in Walter Reed Bout

In four rounds of gory leather slinging, Marty Estis and Norman Jones fought to a draw before a large and appreciative crowd last night at the Army Medical Center, popularly referred to as Walter Reed Hospital. A capacity crowd witnessed the program of seven bouts, pronounced the best ever staged at the center.

A wrestling match, in which John Banko deposited George Bills on the flat of his back in 27 minutes, and a three-round struggle between Mike and Ike were staged as added attractions.

Other results follow:

Bob Kishbaugh defeated Kid Trigger; Stanley Pacewicz drew with Malcolm Smith; Ray Phillips drew with Harry Kirby; Al Sanberg knocked out Jimmie Hansen in two rounds; Ed Mousley defeated George Odom; Charley Wells defeated Bobby Mosley.

C. U. to Quit Track and Boxing

Abandons All Sports Except Basket Ball Until Next Fall.

Financial Conditions Necessitate Move; Meet Is Off.

THE chilly winds of the college sports depression eddied in Washington yesterday with the announcement that Catholic University had canceled its entire intercollegiate athletic program, excepting basket ball, for the remainder of the school year. This sweeping act of financial retrenchment obliterates the fourth annual C. U. track meet and the Cardinal boxing, track and golf teams.

Catholic University is the first nearby college to swing in line with the tendency of a number of Eastern institutions to curb activities in minor sports. Cornell's similar move recently gained widespread attention. The discontinuance of the famous Poughkeepsie regatta is in line with the widespread retrenchment in collegiate circles.

Yesterday's announcement by Catholic University does not include the school's intramural sports program, which includes basket ball, boxing, golf and tennis.

Announcement Cites Depression.

The school's athletic senate, in announcing yesterday's resolution, added that it hoped that the enforced ban would not carry over into next year. The statement announcing the abandonment of the program said:

"The country's educational institutions are still feeling the effect of the business recession and it is due to this present economic and financial exigency that it is necessary to adopt this procedure at Catholic University."

The C. U. track meet was beginning to loom as one of the four or five major indoor events of the East. Since its inauguration it had consistently attracted many of the leading college stars in the region and often drew the entry of nationally known stars. Ray Conger, then holder of the national indoor mile championship, competed in the meet two years ago.

Boxing Teams Ranked High.

While C. U.'s track team never achieved renown, its boxing team has ranked high for the past half decade. With three outstanding intercollegiate boxers in Jack Malevich, Frankie Fullam and Danny Pyne, the Cardinal fisticuffers have pushed the school's colors close to the front of Middle Atlantic competition. Pyne, ace of the team during the past two years, dropped out of school early this week.

The failure of C. U.'s football team to make money last season is partially responsible for yesterday's move, for the grid proceeds generally support the other sports. The Cardinal eleven could do no more than break even, although it was one of the best, if not the best, team ever to represent the school.

C. U. gave up baseball three years ago.

Paul to Risk Title With Fred Miller

Chicago, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—The world's featherweight boxing championship, N. B. A. edition, will be at stake tomorrow night—Friday, the 13th—when Tommy Paul, Buffalo, makes his first titular defense against Freddie Miller, Cincinnati southpaw, in ten rounds at the Chicago Stadium.

Miller is facing Paul for the fourth time. Their previous scuffles occurred before Paul won the title, but Miller won two of their three encounters and is figuring that, as a left-hander, he has a good chance to lift the bauble on Friday the 13th.

Odds on the battle have wavered erratically during this week, but Paul probably will be a favorite at 6 to 5 when they climb through the ropes tomorrow. Neither will have any trouble making the featherweight limit of 126 pounds at the offices of the commission tomorrow afternoon.

Paul won the title in an elimination tournament at Detroit last May. A win over Fidel La Barba not long ago, coupled with sprightly showings during training has convinced followers that he is worthy of the mantle.

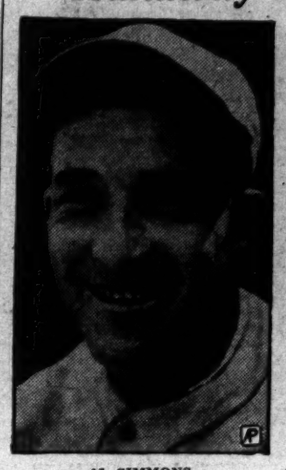
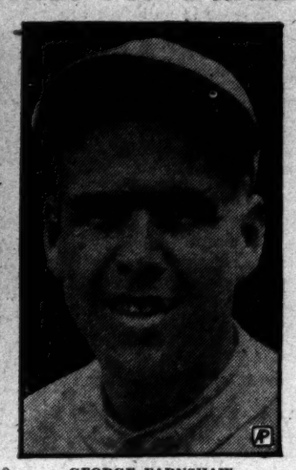
Simmons, Earnshaw See Runaway Race for Yanks



AL SIMMONS.



GEORGE EARNSHAW.

Should Be 25 Games in Front by Last of July, Says Al.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Al Simmons is getting ready to supply hits for the White Sox, but he can't see any one but the Yankees in the 1933 American League race.

"Those Yankees should be 25 games in front of the field by the last of July," Al said. "Who's going to stop them? Certainly not the Red Sox, nor the Browns, nor Detroit, nor the White Sox. I don't think the Indians can muster enough strength to keep a steady pace, and Connie Mack is depending on youngsters to stay up there. Washington won't do it, either. So it looks like the Yanks.

"Ruth will be back—yes, I know he's getting old and all that, but what helps the Babe is the fact that he can conserve his energy with a club like the Yankees. He doesn't have to run himself out all the time; hence, when he has to step lively he can do it. Nope, they look good to me."

A's Pitcher Declares Flag Will Be Won by July 4.

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—George Earnshaw, big Philadelphia Athletics hurler, doesn't like the prospects of the 1933 American League baseball race. He paused in his play in the Agua Caliente open golf tournament today to discuss the situation.

"Unless something happens to the Yanks," opined big George, "it won't be any race after July 4. I don't see anything to stop them unless they split up the club."

George said he hadn't received his contract yet, but indicated he had no intention of delaying the process of signing.

Having delivered himself of this information, he stepped up to the tee, took a batting stance and pulled a long drive over what would have been the left-field fence. He shot an 82 yesterday.

"I just couldn't bunt those putts into the hole," he explained.

COLLEGE OAR CLASSIC IS CANCELED

Poughkeepsie Regatta for 1933 Voted Too Expensive.

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—After surviving all but a wartime emergency over a period of 38 years, the classic Poughkeepsie regatta, championship fixture of the college rowing world, yielded to economic pressure today and passed out of the sports picture for 1933.

Despite the most eloquent efforts of their chairman, Maxwell Stevenson, of Columbia, to save the regatta, even if it had to be sharply curtailed, the stewards of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association decided it was too expensive an athletic luxury to sustain this year, with gate receipts for the profit-making sports dwindling and budgets unbalanced.

Stevenson finally joined the representatives of Cornell, Syracuse, Pennsylvania and the Naval Academy in a unanimous decision not to hold the 1933 regatta, but won their agreement to a resolution to resume the rowing championships in 1934, without qualification.

First Break Since War Years.

The decision marks the first break in the championship since the war years of 1917-18-19. Otherwise, neither business conditions nor the elements have prevented the races from being held annually since Cornell, Pennsylvania and Columbia rowed the first regatta at Poughkeepsie in 1895.

Cornell, long the dominant power on the Hudson and winner of 14 varsity blue ribbons, was understood to have led the fight for a year's "moratorium." Cornell's athletic authorities earlier this week decided to abandon intercollegiate rowing for the year. They are expected to be joined in this move by their up-State rival, Syracuse, a member of the I. R. A. since 1901.

The other three members of the association, Columbia, Navy and Pennsylvania, all expect to continue rowing, to some extent, for the year.

All Invited Crews Lack Finances.

All of the institutions annually invited to compete with the members of the association, including California, 1932 varsity winner, already indicated inability to finance the sport this year. The only hope held out for California was that popular subscription would send the title holders East again.

The suggestion of the alumni or other outside support, as well as the possibility of holding the regatta elsewhere to reduce costs, was discarded by the stewards. It was felt, Stevenson said, that any attempt to raise athletic funds at a time when so much human distress exists would be bad policy.

The chairman estimated that, with a full fleet on the Hudson, the cost of transportation, maintenance and other arrangements for the Poughkeepsie Regatta ranges from $40,000 to $70,000.

G. U. GRIDMEN SCHEDULE 2 NEW FOES

William & Mary and Manhattan to Be Met Next Fall.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY'S 1933 Football Team will play eight games, four of them at Griffith Stadium, it was announced by Gabe Murphy, graduate manager of athletics. The schedule shows no appreciable lack of "big games," as was predicted when the football department was reorganized late last season, but nevertheless will include four traditional rivals, N. Y. U., Detroit, West Virginia Wesleyan and Bucknell.

In their stead Georgetown has listed two new foes in Manhattan College, to be played in New York October 14, and William and Mary to be met October 28. The Hoyas also have renewed relations with Boston College, after a 2-year layoff. The Eagles will be met at Boston, November 4.

Play Carnegie Tech Here.

Two of the choicest games on the Georgetown schedule will be played in Washington—the Carnegie Tech game, November 18, and the final game of the abbreviated season, with West Virginia University, November 25.

Baltimore will be the scene of the Western Maryland game, which has been one of the grid fixtures of Washington for the past three years. The Terrors will be met in the vast Baltimore Stadium on October 21.

The 1932 Georgetown team was able to beat only two of the representatives on next season's schedule, Mount St. Mary's (26 to 0) and Canisius (14 to 6). Mount St. Mary's, as usual, will be the initial opponent of the Hoyas, to be met at Griffith Stadium on September 30. Canisius again will be played in Buffalo.

Georgetown played nine games last year.

The 1933 team will be captained by Tom Carolan, veteran end, and will have the services for the final year of Wilmer Bradley, heavy-hitting full back. Among the mainstays of last season's team who will graduate in June are Capt. Ray Hudson, end; Al Kelly, half back; Bernie Donoghue, quarter back; Louis Dee, half back; Dick Danner, guard; Russ Danieu, half back; John Shimmens, full back, and Gunnar Anderson, tackle.

Jack Hagerty and Mush Dubofsky will remain as coaches.

The schedule:

September 30, Mount St. Mary's College, at Washington.
October 8, Canisius College, at Buffalo, N. Y.; 14, Manhattan College, at New York City; 22, Western Maryland College, at Baltimore; 29, William and Mary College, at Washington.
November 4, Boston College, at Boston; 18, Carnegie Tech, at Washington; 25, West Virginia University, at Washington.

Rally Brings Old Liners Victory

Duke's 15-13 Lead at Half Overcome by Maryland.

Carolinian Threats in Final Minutes Are Staved Off.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

IN a game thoroughly saturated with thrills, the University of Maryland rose to dizzy heights to inflict a 30-28 defeat on a heretofore undefeated Duke University quintet before a riotous audience of 4,000 fans last night at Ritchie Coliseum. Bedlam reigned as the timekeeper's gun spat in the air, relieving the nervous tension that gripped the throng.

A majority of the fans who draped themselves around the spacious Maryland sports arena came with hopes of a Terrapin victory, but slim hopes at best. Odds on Duke were smaller than a Scotchman's tip. Earlier in the season the powerful Carolinians had stopped Georgetown and George Washington on successive nights, teams heretofore rated above the Old Liners this year.

Maryland Earned Victory.

Duke's marksmen did not exhibit the same accurate aim for the hoop that was responsible for the defeat of the above teams earlier in the season. Numerous shots popped in and then out of the basket. Others circled the rim and then sank back into action. But the brand of basket ball Maryland played earned the victory, not Duke's faulty shots.

The Southerners, much to their surprise, found Maryland matching them point for point in a first half that sent cheers and groans alternately bumping into the roof from the Maryland side of the court. Duke finally edged out in front to lead by a 15-13 count at the intermission.

The spectators who honestly believed this gruelling pace could be maintained in the second half could be counted on one hand. Duke came out for the last half with intentions of increasing its [illegible] proportions, but [illegible] continued to dog its heels.

Chase and Vincent Score.

Not long after the resumption of hostilities Spider Chase knotted the score at 19-19 for Maryland. Rufus Vincent, Maryland's giant center, who led the scoring with 12 points, grabbed a pass under his own basket a moment later and rammed the ball down the throat of the ring to put Maryland ahead for good.

The battle waged at a merry and sizzling pace thereafter, but the Terps clung to their lead with the desperation of a shipwrecked sailor clinging to a spar. Roy Yowell, Chase and Vincent were behind the big guns that wrecked Duke's hopes.

The dramatic climax came with less than two minutes to go when Henry Lewis drew a foul with his team trailing by one point, 29 to 28. The ball struck the far side of the rim and bounded into the outstretched arms

Dutch Ruether Signs With Oakland Club

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Walter "Dutch" Ruether, veteran baseball pitcher whose years on the mound include service with the New York Yankees, Washington Senators and Cincinnati Reds, has been signed by the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League, Vic Devencenzi, club vice president, announced here today.

A sore arm, which he blamed on night playing, caused Ruether to be released at the end of last season by the San Francisco Missions. He has been with Coast League clubs since 1929.

PARKE RIDES FOUR STRAIGHT WINNERS AT JEFFERSON PARK

Feature Race Is Included In String

Cresta Run Is Winner of Sprint Test on Muddy Track.

Monte Finishes Day on Allegretto, 7-1, in Seventh.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—The local racing strip was a sea of mud and slop and, with the sun conspicuous by its absence, conditions here today were anything but ideal for the sport.

Monte Parke provided the day's sensation when he piloted the last four winners on the program. Parke's streak began with Abe Furst in the fourth. In the feature he brought C. V. Whitney's Cresta Run home ahead. He rode Moreheart in the sixth and completed his string with Allegretto, a 7-1 shot, in the final.

Cresta Run was driving hard to head Marie Jean out of the purse in the sprint feature. Modesto was beaten six lengths for the place. The winner negotiated the distance in 1:15 1-5 and was favorite at $4.60 for $2.

Cresta Run, as usual, lacked early foot. The Mad Hatter gelding was well back for a quarter mile as Marion T. and Ozita were using themselves up staging a duel for the lead. Parke got the choice to running after leaving the far side and reached the front when straightened out for home. Oziti tired fast, but Marie Jean, outrun, closed very fast on the outside of the winner to make it a thrilling finish. Modesto, which raced forwardly from the start, was an easy third.

Plucky Girl Runs Plucky Race.

Plucky Girl ran as her name would imply to capture the opening purse by a length in a drive with the neglected Abstain, with Deserve a scant head behind in third place. Apprentice Arcaro rode a fine race on the winner sending the My Play filly into the lead right after the break and saving enough to hold Abstain in check through the closing stages. Deserve clung to third place throughout the mile and a sixteenth trip. The winner paid $14.80.

Miss Alden, paying $21.80, was an easy winner of the second race, scoring by three lengths over Hugue, with the latter nosing Whitharral out of the place.

My Joanne Dies at End of Second.

B. K. Sheld's 3-year-old filly, My Joanne, second choice, in the field of twelve maidens, dropped dead right after the finish. She lacked speed and was pulled up entering the stretch. The boy jumped off after passing the finish line and My Joanne sagged to the ground and died. Miss Alden overtook Whitharral, the pacemaker, late in the stretch and drew clear with little effort.

After several vain attempts, Donny Johnny entered the winner's column in the third contest, coming from behind to drive home by a length and a half at odds of $16.60 for $2. Beguile saved the place by a length from Bob's Luck. Beguile appeared a winner in the stretch, taking command after Ad Remmcon and Bob's Luck had tired, showing the way, but Donny Johnny finished resolutely on the outside and won going away.

Abie Furst Wins By a Nose.

Monte Parke put up a strong ride to get Abe Furst first home past the judges in the fourth race. The gelded son of Upset was up to beat the heavily backed Making Bubbles by a nose. Barashkova was a decisively beaten third. Making Bubbles and Abe Furst had the race between them at all times with Parke rating the ultimate winner close to the favorite's pace, until the head of the stretch. Abe Furst then wore down the leader in a long, hard drive. Barashkova held on well to beat Dr. Syntax for the show. The winner was a 3-to-1 shot.

The crowd was treated to another tight finish when Monte Parke drove Morheart across the finish by a nose in the sixth race for his third winner of the afternoon. Uforme was second, a length before Tadcaster. Morheart was kept close to the pace and, after taking command from Toltec entering the stretch, just lasted to stave off Uforme's final bid. Tadcaster lost ground, but finished gamely. The winner paid $9.80.

AT THE POST

DEAR AL: JEFFERSON PARK, JANUARY 12.

It's just possible that Monte Parke will have a say in the distribution of the leading riding honors of 1933. Known for sometime as Ivan Parke's brother, this young man is fast earning a reputation of his own. He is leading the riders here for the meeting and his four winners today sends him far out in front for this year. Monte still has a week to go before Gilbert and Mills swing back into action at Miami and he may run up a margin that will worry his better known rivals. In addition, Parke is improving with leaps and bounds. His performances here the last few days have been brilliant and he may carry the battle right to Hank and Johnny. BILL.

FIRST RACE—I'm trying the run-down system on QUARTERDECK. This son of Man o' War is slated to win here. Will like the course tomorrow. I know he has been especially prepared for a killing and this may be the spot they have selected. GLASBYS CHOICE and THRICE appear best of the others.

SECOND RACE—LORRAINE S. seems to have an edge over the group seeking the purse in this sprint. POLYLITH, bred by W. R. Coe, earns her keep in races over sloppy tracks. Has been showing signs of a wake-up and may like conditions tomorrow. TOWN LIMIT for the show end.

THIRD RACE—COUSIN JUDY showed a burst of speed behind By Gracious in a race last month that made me remember the daughter of Sun Pal. If they have been waiting for a cheap field, this appears to fill the ticket. Calvert is likely to ride. PHANTASIME and DOROTHY HICKS for the rest.

FOURTH RACE—ALBANE has been whispered around the paddock as a youngster which has worked well. In the mud, anything can win this. RACE STREET and GEN. PULASKI to fill out the money positions.

FIFTH RACE—DR. PARRISH, the likely favorite, is my choice in the feature but will have to step lively to take the measure of FAYLIN. This one turned in a neat victory the last time and is at home in the mud. JACK BIENER to show.

SIXTH RACE—Here's another one I'm trying to run down. BLUE DAMSEL is returning to something approaching old-time form and will be a mighty hard one to beat in this company. JUDGE LUEDERS and FLORENCE DOLAN have the edge on the rest.

SEVENTH RACE—ELIZABETH S., improving steadily, seems ripe for a winning effort. WOOD RIVER and KLIP DRIFT to place and show.

Gallaudet Beaten By Virginia, 42-11

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va. Jan. 12.—University of Virginia's quintet continued its scoring spree tonight by vanquishing Gallaudet, 42 to 11. Opening the game with a rush, the Cavaliers registered a total of 16 points before the District lads could score. It fell to Rayhill, a substitute, to cage the first basket for Gallaudet, and this player proved high point man for his team with a total of five points.

Virginia guarded closely throughout the first half, holding the visitors to six points. Midway the period Rayhill made his second basket and just before the whistle sounded for the intermission, Gooding, another substitute, stood in midfloor and shot a goal. The count at half time stood: Virginia, 28; Gallaudet, 6.

The second half was marked throughout by a poor exhibition of shooting on the part of both teams. Coach Tebell, of Virginia, started with a substitute team and for five minutes there was no scoring. Midway the period the starting line-up was sent in, and quick goals were made by Rogers and Hudson. With five minutes left to play, Purvis was sent in for Harrison, at forward, and Tayloy took Sturm's place.

Gallaudet lone goal in the half was made by Gooding, while Rayhill, Burdett and Antilla made good on shots from the charity mark.

Wilson Tossers Bow To Potomac College

Potomac College's five invaded Washington last night and hung a 45-22 defeat on the Wilson Teachers in a game played on the Wilson Normal School floor. The visitors had a 17-9 advantage at the half. Smith led them in scoring with 13 points. Fox was the high counter for the Teachers.

Mt. Rainier Five Faces Hyattsville

Hyattsville High and Mount Rainier High basketers come to grips tonight in the first of their series for the Prince Georges County championship on the Mount Rainier court at 8 o'clock.

Unusual interest is manifest in the series this winter as for the first time the Mounts are given an even chance for victory. They now have a team which has represented the school for four years or since establishment of the institution. The team has steadily improved and last year in the Mount Rainier Gymnasium forced Hyattsville to three extra periods before succumbing.

Prior to the opening of the Mount Rainier School Hyattsville won the Prince Georges County title by default, having no opposition.

Hyattsville will start its regular combination, including Blaine Calhoun and Harold Brown, forwards; Dick Quantrille, center, and Burdette Cogar and John Clarke, guards. De Voe Meade, substitute center, is the only member of the squad who will not be available.

Favorites Win Games In Community League

Favorites came out on top in Community Center League games played last night, all of the teams winning by comfortable margins.

In Section A Sholl's unlimited, A. A. U. titleholders, swamped the Tremonts, 54-13, while the United Grays handed Swann Service a 32-23 setback.

Miller's 29-19 victory over First Baptist featured the card in Section B. Mount Vernon bowied over Naval Reserves, 40-24, in their game.

LADYSMAN IS CHOICE FOR DERBY

W. R. Coe Colt Made Winter Book Favorite at 10 to 1.

By ORLO ROBERTSON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Many a promising thoroughbred may fall by the wayside between now and the fifty-ninth running of the Kentucky Derby, but followers of the equine "bluebloods," who pick their horses on past performances, figure T. W. R. Coe's Ladysman will be out in front when the crack 3-year-olds of the year complete their one and one-quarter mile jaunt around the Churchill Downs oval May 6.

A month before the entry book is scheduled to close, the winter book commissioners today indicated they will open their quotations with Ladysman the choice at 10 to 1. Last year Top Flight was the winter book favorite at 8 to 1, but failed to start.

Deserves Honors on His Record.

On the basis of his 2-year-old record, the son of Pompey deserves the honor. Ladysman won the Arlington Park Futurity, swept all before him at Saratoga, finished second to Leo Rosenberg's Kerry Patch, an outsider, in the richest of all American races, the Belmont Park Futurity, and earned $111,435 to top the juvenile money winning list. He won five of his nine starts, was second twice and out of the money in his two other efforts.

The Coe speedster slowed down considerably, however, before the end of the season and was finally forced into retirement with bad legs, just before the Pimlico Futurity, at Belmont Park. However, from where Ladysman is wintering comes word that the colt will be ready for the races early in the spring.

Although not ranking among the leading money-winning 2-year-olds, James F. Johnson's Repaid and F. A. Griffith's Sarada will be strong candidates for the Derby, if entered. Both showed unusual staying ability in the late fall races and gave every evidence they would carry on as 3-year-olds.

4 Capital Colleges In Action Tonight

Maryland, Georgetown, Catholic University and Gallaudet take to the road tonight for basket ball competition on four separate fronts.

Seeking its third straight Southern Conference win, Maryland meets V. M. I. tonight at Lexington, Va., while Georgetown stacks up against stiff competition in Brooklyn, meeting the Brooklyn Knights of Columbus, a collection of former college stars.

Catholic University has its work cut out for it and is a definite underdog in its meeting tonight in Trenton, N. J., with Rider College, which annually produces one of the strongest teams in the East. Gallaudet steps into the big time of basket ball in this section, meeting Washington and Lee at Lexington.

G. U. Prep Trounces Bethesda-Chevy Chase

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School's winning streak came to a sad end yesterday at Garrett Park, where Georgetown Prep walloped the Twins for a 30-23 victory in a rough-and-tumble game.

With Nee and Allen showing the way the Prepmen rolled up a 19-9 lead in the first half and succeeded in holding their opponents in the final minutes of play to gain the victory. Althaus led Bethesda in scoring.

JONES - BUILT GOLF LINKS READY

Sports Enthusiasts to Gather Today at Augusta Club.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—The Augusta National Golf Club course will be opened tomorrow by its president and codesigner, Bobby Jones, to scores of sports enthusiasts throughout the South and East.

Several trains are to arrive here tomorrow, bringing upward of 100 Eastern sportsmen, including several officials of the United States Golf Association.

There will be no formal exercises for the opening of the course, which was constructed under the direction of Jones and Dr. Alistair Mackenzie. "We lovers of golf will just go ahead and play all we want to over the new course and see how we like it," Jones said.

Each hole on the course was fashioned after some famous hole which Jones has played in his golfing travels through the world. The clubhouse is distinctly a golfing clubhouse. There are no rooms for bridge, dancing and parties of the sort. And there are no side attractions such as tennis or fishing.

Truly National Course.

One of his purposes, Bobby said, was "to present a course that will find a place in North American golfing history as one of the layouts truly natural in character—truly a national golf club."

The topography of the 365-acre tract of ground was particularly suited for Jones' plans for each of the nineteen holes—there's an extra one for deadlocked playoffs. The greens are of Italian rye grass and the fairways of Bermuda.

Among those en route here by special train are Francis Ouimet, former national amateur champion; Charles H. Sabin, Jesse Spalding, Frank A. Willard, Julian S. Myrick, Lee Maxwell and Bernon S. Prentice.

A score or more men prominent in sport and business already are here. They include Jess Sweetser, former British amateur champion; G. Herbert Walker, donor of the Walker Cup; Paul Patterson, of Baltimore; John Martin, H. H. Ramsey, former U. S. G. A. president; John G. Jackson and Archie Reid, present vice president and secretary, respectively, of the U. S. G. A., and Melvin A. Traylor and Bruce Barton.

Hitting the Headpin

PLANS for the approaching Suburban Sweepstakes will be discussed at a meeting of the Washington Suburban Duckpin Association tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at the Mount Rainier alleys. The annual doubles and classified tournament will be among the matters to be taken up. All member alleys of the association are requested to have a representative attend.

Henry Hiser will head a team to Baltimore Sunday for the first block of a home and home match with the Recreation Happy Five of that city. Perce Wolfe, Tony Santini and Charley Walson are among those who will bowl for the locals.

Youngblood's 1,740 set and 624 game topped the Takoma Business Men's loop last night. Howard Parsons rolled a 162 game and even 400 set.

Princeton added to its lead in the Intercollegiate League by whitewashing Brown last night. Phil King, of the same team, garnered individual honors with his 149 and 363 scores. Cornell's 562 game and Princeton's 1,539 set out-distanced the teams.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

RADIO receiving tubes without filament, which will never burn out and probably will far outlast the radio set into which they are first installed, were envisioned for the not-far-distance radio future in a lecture and demonstration held in New York at a meeting of the Institute of Radio Engineers. The speaker was Dr. August Hund, formerly of the Bureau of Standards, research engineer of Wired Radio, Inc., a subsidiary organization of the North American Co.

For the last year and a half the new tubes have been the subject of intense and secret research in the Newark laboratories of Wired Radio by Dr. Hund and his associates.

A set employing four or five of the bulbs received programs from local broadcasting stations and reproduced the music loud enough to be heard clearly throughout the hall. A one-tube receiver intercepted part of a program and operated a loud speaker. Dr. Hund explained that for an average-size room in the home such volume as he attained with the one-tube set would be ample.

An official of Wired Radio, when asked if the new tubes were likely to find their way on the market in sets very soon, admitted that "something is likely to happen within a year." Radio sets using the new bulbs can be made and sold much more cheaply than good present-day sets employing vacuum tubes, the official said. In the Newark laboratory, the new tubes have been operating continuously for more than 1,200 hours. Dr. Hund said the bulbs were easy and simple to make and did not have to have the air removed from them.

THE annual observance of the anniversary of Stephen Foster's death, held under the auspices of the community fine art committee of the Civic Club of Allegheny County, Pa., will be climaxed this year by a Nation-wide broadcast of a special Stephen Foster memorial program. The program will originate in the studios of WCAE, in Pittsburgh, the city of Foster's birth, and will be heard on a network including WRC at 10:30 p. m.

The broadcast will be an exact reproduction of the old minstrel concerts that were popular during Foster's life. It was in these old minstrel concerts that most of his beloved melodies were first made poular.

Bob White, sage of the air, is now a daily feature from WMAL, broadcasting at 8 o'clock in the morning. When you hear the whistle of the southern quail you will know that Bob White is just coming on with bits of his philosophy.

Bob White, "just this side of 40—but which," has broadcast from the leading stations of the country and across Canada. He not only appears before the "mike" but is known to the theater-going public. He played at one time with Jesse Bonstelle, of the Detroit Civic Theater, along with Joan Lowell and Melvin Douglas, of Hollywood fame.

ONE never knows when listening to Amos 'n' Andy where they are broadcasting from. If not at their home station in Chicago, they are likely to be most any place.

As a matter of fact, last night they broadcast from WRC, in Washington. It has been kept very quiet, but Amos 'n' Andy have been guests over the week-end of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Shipp, at 3733 Oliver street northwest, and their old friend, Lawrence Richey, Secretary to the President. The comedians have been enjoying a vacation here incognito and yesterday spent the day hunting at Mr. Shipp's country place, near Mount Vernon.

They probably will leave today for New York before returning to Chicago.

Continuing her reminiscences and drawing further upon the knowledge gained in years of study of the problem of child psychology, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will discuss "Children at School Age" when she appears on Pond's program over WRC at 9:30 p. m.

The fiery debate between Senator William E. Borah and Senator Hiram Johnson on the war debt question which this week attracted National attention, will be reenacted during the "March of Time" (WJSV, 8:30 p. m.).

Harry Reser, master of the banjo and director of the Eskimos (WRC, 8 p. m.), began his professional career as a pianist in a summer resort down in Tennessee.

During the first two seasons, he says, there was a banjo lying on top of his piano that he didn't think enough of to "pick it up and dust it off."

With a new mystery confronting him, Charlie Chan begins threading his way through the maze of clews in "The Chinese Parrot" over WMAL at 7:30 p. m. "The Chinese Parrot" is the second of the mystery serials being boardcast by the Five Star Theater relating to the adventures of this popular Chinese sleuth of fiction.

THE criss-cross of questions asked by the performers in one radio program of those in another seems to be increasing. Ben Bernie, the other night, addressed the following question to Ed Wynn: "You have been in show business all your life. Did you ever hear of anybody making a song out of the rhyme of "Mother Goose?'"

When Ed Wynn's program came on, the comedian broadcast his reply to Ben Bernie. It was: "You can't fool me about that 'Mother Goose' song. It's correct title is 'Mother Goose (goes) where Papa Goose (goes).'"

Since questions apparently are in order, here's one some one should ask Ed Wynn: "If Ed is a fire chief, why does he wear a red helmet?"

"Don't fire chiefs wear red helmets?" the assistant conductor of this column asks in surprise.

"No! They wear white helmets!" we reply.

"Well, surely firemen wear red helmets. I have an Ed Wynn advertisement right here in front of me showing the firemen on an engine, every one of them in a red helmet."

"Wrong again," we counter. "Firemen wear black helmets. As far as we know only the men on fire patrols (salvage corps) wear red helmets. As for a fire chief, we have yet to see one wearing a red helmet."

"Oh, Promise Me," from De Koven's "Robin Hood" will be Jessica Dragonette's operatic selection during the Cities Service concert with the Cavaliers and Rosario Bourdon's Orchestra at 8 o'clock tonight. Miss Dragonette also will sing "A Kiss in the Dark," by Herbert; "Here in My Arms," from Rodgers' "Dearest Enemy," and Jerome Kern's "Kalua."

Mrs. Mary A. Breckenridge, founder of the Frontier Nursing Service, will speak on Frontier Nursing" over WJSV at 3:30 p. m.

RALPH KIRBERY, the dream singer, believes he has earned a new contract on the air. The other day he received a hurry call to report to the studios for an audition for a new program. Kirbery lives in Paterson, N. J. He rushed out, climbed into his car and drove for about 2 miles when the car stopped because of water in the gas. He telephone a friend who came to his rescue and the trip continued in the friend's car. They had just reached New York when a tire went flat. Ralph changed to a taxi which ran out of gas after a few blocks. Another taxi finally got him to the studios.

Stock Prices Slump Again In Profit and Short Drives

Six-tenths Loss Recrded as Sales Dwindle to 916,072 Shares.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Today's stock market cut its cloth closely to Wednesday's pattern, which meant that bulls again unsuccessfully tried for a definite break through the highs of the last two months' trading range.

Prices nosed upward during the morning and held fairly well until the last hour when wheat's weakness again influenced Wall street sentiment. Long traders took profits, and shorts who had been fighting the rise added their contributions to the small trickle of selling orders, with the result that losses ranging from fractions to about a point were rather plentiful. Volume, however, simmered down to 916,072 shares, the week's smallest turnover.

Stocks appeared to be largely under professional auspices, and most brokers said there had been little evidence of a livelier "public interest." Traders searching for market guidance in the news had their troubles for their pains, events of the business day being of a routine nature. Some stocks reflected special influences, both for the advance and the decline, but these were exceptions to the general rule of relatively narrow changes. Preferred issues of McCrory stores weakened severely; Wall street recalled that dividend action on the cumulative 6 per cent shares had been postponed last month until the management could get a better line on 1932 results.

Procter & Gamble met rather stiff pressure from those who felt that competitive price cutting on soap products might influence Saturday's dividend decision. The stock lost 2 net. Gulf States Steel preferred was up nearly 3 on reports that the company's position had improved. Drug, Inc., rallied in response to news that the company had disposed of its controlling interest in a British company.

U. S. Steel and American Telephone were sluggish all day, the former losing nearly a point net. Telephone's net reaction was inconsequential. American Can, Westinghouse, Loew's, Case and Bethlehem sagged in the neighborhood of a point. Shares of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco, whose favorable 1932 earnings statement was hardly a fair sample of what last year did to companies in most lines of business, were steady.

Stocks.

Prices sagged again as an early advance yielded to profit and short drives. The loss averaged six-tenths of a point. Sales dwindled to 916,072 shares.

Bonds.

The upward movement was halted, and bonds closed unchanged. Sales decreased to $15,501,000. Some heaviness was revealed.

Curb.

Efforts to resume gains failed, and the market turned dull and irregular. Sales volume slowed down to 120,000 shares.

Wheat.

Doubts over the agricultural legislative program in Washington started selling. Wheat prices slumped again. Corn and oats were affected, closing lower. May wheat sold at 49⅛ to 49¼ cents.

Cotton.

Trading was less active. Scattered Southern selling cut prices. The general market stood net unchanged to 3 points lower. Liverpool reported some hedging.

BOND PRICES STAND AT FORMER CLOSING

Trading Volume Is Reduced to $15,501,000; Some Heaviness Revealed.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—The bond market, unable to hurdle sizeable profit-taking barriers, halted on its upward march today and surveyed some of its recent substantial gains.

Trading was still quite active, although the volume was somewhat under that of yesterday, sales totaled $15,501,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans was unchanged.

In view of the fact that the market, with the exception of only one session, has progressed since December 27, some dealers warned that a reaction might be expected. Since the December upswing started the Associated Press-Standard Statistics average has recovered 5.4 points.

The secondary groups were the principal victims of the realizing wave, although most losses were held to about a point. There were some exceptions, however. McCrory Stores 5½s dropped 8 and Pressed Steel Car 5s were off 7 points.

While there was a heavy tone displayed by liens of Baltimore & Ohio, American & Foreign Power, International Telephone, Denver & Rio Grande, Columbia Gas, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Postal Telegraph and Pure Oil, resistance was shown by numerous other issues.

United States Government obligations were a trifle uneasy, following reports that the Federal Reserve System was selling some of its securities. Treasury 3s and 3⅛s were heavily traded, their losses ranging from 6-32 to 7-32 of a point. Several new highs for the past year or more were reached by this department before a reactionary tone developed.

The foreign section was slightly irregular. While German government 5½s and 7s held some of their gains, several corporate loans of Germany declined.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

(Associated Press.)

London—Owing to this being settlement day, business on the stock exchange was moderate. Foreign bonds, industrials and gilt-edged securities were steady, while other groups eased. The closing was quiet.

Paris—Trading on the bourse was hesitant pending the disclosure of the French government's financial projects. Price changes were narrow and the closing was indecisive.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse were unsettled and the closing was weaker.

Electric Utilities Organize To End Propaganda Blame

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Electric public utility companies comprising 85 per cent of the industry in the United States tonight announced the organization of Edison Electric Institute as a "definite answer to demands made by public utility leaders" that the industry "divest itself of all semblance of propaganda activities."

Edison Electric Institute will replace the National Electric Light Association, the trade organization of the industry which has been attacked in hearings before the Federal Power Commission for alleged propaganda activities prejudicial to the public good.

Announcement of the new trade association was made at the offices of the Niagara-Hudson Power Corporation. Utilities leaders present included B. C. Cobb, chairman of the Commonwealth & Southern Co.; Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of the Niagara-Hudson, and George B. Cortelyou, president of the Consolidated Gas Co.

"The formation of this body," the announcement said, "is looked upon as providing a definite answer to demands made by public utility leaders at the convention of the National Electric Light Association at Atlantic City last June, that the industry divest itself of all semblance of propaganda activities, that it assume an attitude of frankness and ready cooperation in its dealings with the public and with regulatory bodies, that complete and frequent financial reports be made by all companies.

"The determination of the members of the association to bind themselves to a rigid code of ethics is seen in a paragraph of the constitution which provides that the membership committee, subject to the approval of the board of trustees and in accordance with resolutions which such board may from time to time adopt, shall have jurisdiction and authority to consider and investigate the business practices of any company member and to expel, suspend or take any other disciplinary action against any member guilty of a violation of proper and ethical business practices, or for failure to furnish information as required."

"It is stated that companies, by virtue of becoming members of the institute, shall be deemed to have consented to the right of the institute to impose such disciplinary action."

The constitution further provides:

1. That all companies publish complete financial statements not less than annually which shall have been certified by independent certified public accountants.

2. That all statements and data furnished to consumers, stock exchanges and stockholders; all information designated for public dissemination and all reports to governmental authorities shall be accurate and clearly indicate their source.

3. All contracts between any member companies which involve the furnishing of managements, supervisory, purchasing, construction, engineering or financing services shall be so drawn and so operate in practice that the charges to the operating company shall be reasonable and commensurate with the value of the services rendered and the fair cost thereof to the company furnishing the services.

4. Company members from time to time shall answer such questionnaires relative to their organization, financing, methods of operation and business practices as may be requested by the resolution of the board of trustees.

Pressed Steel Company Placed in Receivership

Jersey City, N. J., Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Vice Chancellor John O. Bigelow today said he had appointed receivers for the Pressed Steel Car Co., of Pittsburgh, a $50,000,000 corporation, which manufactures 20 per cent of the steel railroad cars used in the country.

The receivers are Julius S. Rippel, Newark banker, and L. Edward Jerman, attorney, of Jersey City.

Bank Rate Unchanged.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—The New York Federal Reserve Bank today announced no change in its 2½ per cent rediscount rate.

Frisco Asks to Abandon Arkansas Branch Line

(Associated Press.)

The receivers for the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway, yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission permission to abandon operation of its Evadale Branch in Poinsett and Mississippi Counties, Ark.

The line is 18 miles long and extends from Evadale junction to Deckerville. The receivers said the branch has been operated at a loss for a number of years.

CURB GAINS HALTED IN IRREGULAR SALES

Profit Taking Reappears as Trading Volume Drops to 120,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Efforts to resume the advance in the Curb Market today attracted little following, and the list turned dull and irregular.

The turnover was only 120,000 shares, against 200,000 yesterday. Profit taking appeared in spots, and a number of advances registered earlier in the session were lost in the late trading.

In the utility group, Electric Bond & Share pushed up a point in fairly active trading, then receded to close ⅛ lower. Columbia Gas preferred lost a point, and New England Telephone 2 points, in light trading. The American Gas & Electric issues were up fractionally.

Industrials were mixed. Deere lost a point, as the wheat market turned rather heavy. Aluminum Co. was unable to retain an early gain of 1. Northwestern Yeast, a high-priced issue, made one of its occasional appearances, trading at 112, up 7, and a new high for 1932-33. Singer rose 3, to 100. United Shoe Machinery, Carnation Co., New Jersey Zinc and others were firm in light trading. Oils were mostly steady, although Humble lost a point.

England Suspends Sale Of Boots Drug Company

London, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Bankers concerned in arranging the sale of the controlling interest in Boots Pure Drug Co., now owned by the United Drug Co., of America, have been asked by the treasury to suspend negotiations until the permission of the chancellor of the exchequer is obtained. The company, it was announced yesterday, is to be sold to Hambros Bank, Ltd.; Erlangers, Ltd., and Philip Hall & Partners, Ltd.

The Evening Standard said permission for the sale had been withdrawn because of the possible repercussions of such a big deal on the sterling exchange.

The purchase price was to be more than £7 a share for a block of 1,000,000 shares, said the Evening Standard. This would mean the transfer to the American sellers of more than £7,000,000, or about $23,000,000.

WHEAT VALUES SINK ON SELLING DRIVES

Farm Allotment Is Blamed by Traders; Corn and Oats Decline.

Chicago, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Dubious over agricultural legislative developments at Washington, many traders turned to the selling side of the wheat market late today, and prices slid downhill.

Much talk was heard that the farm allotment bill had been so overloaded with amendments the measure would have little chance of being signed by President Hoover. Rumors of export business gave backbone to the corn market.

Wheat closed weak, ⅝ to 1⅛ under yesterday's finish; corn, ⅛ off to ¼ up; oats, ¼ down, and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to 5 cents advance.

Allotment Bill Blamed.

Speculative interest regarding wheat centered on the progress of the allotment bill in Congress, especially during the last half of the day. From the outset, nervous fluctuations in wheat were the rule, and prices went both above and below yesterday's finish, but buying impetus finally wore off, and increased liquidating sales on the part of holders of future delivery contracts characterized dealings at the windup. The market also felt the weight of offerings from spreaders who were buying at Winnipeg against selling here.

Bears in wheat emphasized reports that an almost worldwide movement to tax bread appeared to be developing. Measures taken or proposed in Canada, England and New Zealand were especially cited, and assertions were made that the allotment plan pending at Washington would increase the price of flour $2.50 to $4.00 a barrel.

Corn and oats came in for more buying attention today than has recently been the rule. A brisk export demand for Argentine corn was noted, with indications of export business from the United States.

Provisions were irregular, influenced by a let-up in shipping demand for lard.

COTTON PRICES CUT ON SOUTHERN SALES

March Closes at 6.18 as Market Is Unchanged to 3 Points Lower.

New York, Jan. 12 (A.P.).—Trading in cotton was less active today and prices changed but little.

After advancing to 6.32 in the earlier trading, March contracts declined to 6.18 under scattered Southern selling and liquidation promoted by the easier tone of the wheat and stock markets. The close was barely steady with prices net unchanged to 3 points lower.

The opening was unchanged to 2 points higher and active months sold 9 to 10 points net higher in the first hour in response to relatively steady Liverpool cables and renewed trade buying. These gains were extended slightly around midday, but the market eased in the late trading under realizing combined with some scattered Southern selling. Closing quotations were 13 to 15 points off from the best and at the lowest of the day.

Other Markets Watched.

In the absence of more positive incentives in the general news, cotton traders watched the grain and stock markets, and cotton fluctuations followed the price movements in these quarters.

Liverpool cables reported a quiet market with some hedging and Japanese selling absorbed by trade calling and said there was a fair business in cotton cloths from Manchester. According to the New York Cotton Exchange service, consumption of cotton in this country during December amounted to 437,000 bales, compared with 503,000 in November and 415,000 in December a year ago. Exports today, 27,373, making 4,506,031 so far this season. Port receipts, 15,487. U. S. port stocks, 4,772,553.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

RADIANT HEAT.

THERE is something about a glowing fire that is very appealing. People like to sit before open fires, to toast their toes, and to feel the shiny heat in their faces. We think of stoves, grates, open fires and other fires in the room as sources of this shiny heat that, somehow, has a quality missing in other forms. The scientific name for shiny heat is radiant heat. The newer discoveries about light and heat have taught us that this preference for radiant heat is not a creature of the imagination or a hangover of memories of childhood days. It has its feet on a very sure and a very scientific foundation.

An instrument for measuring radiant heat has been devised. Its name is the globe thermometer. This instrument consists of a copper ball, about 6 inches in diameter, and colored black. In it a thermometer is inserted, the bulb in the center and the registering part of the stem on the outside. If this is exposed in a room where there is radiant heat it will register that, while an ordinary thermometer is showing the heat of the ordinary kind.

Dr. H. M. Vernon, who has been working on heating and ventilating problems for a long time, says that a room will feel comfortable where the ordinary thermometer registers 49, provided the globe thermometer registers 13.

Of several kinds of radiant heat, he gives a gas fire first place. The radiant heat from such a fire is twice as nigh as that from an anthracite stove and ten times that of hot water coils.

But there are objections to all forms of direct heating. An open fire must have drafts of air or it will not burn. This means cold currents of air on the neck and back. It means cold floors and cold feet.

In the old-fashioned gas logs there was considerable leakage of gas into the room and some formation of carbon monoxide due to incomplete combustion. Stoves and heaters were liable to leak, as well as to make some carbon monoxide, and to clear some dust into smelly substances. The heating engineers have sought to get around these objections by providing radiant heat by means of electric heaters. Since electric heating is apt to be expensive, they use this method only for obtaining radiant heat.

The other heating they supply by means of ceiling panels. Behind or above these are steam coils, hot air flues, water coils or electric resistance wires. In this way, the floor of the room above and the ceiling of that below are made warm, and they, in turn, warm up the adjacent air. The heating is indirect, it is well distributed, and drafts and cold floors are not sources of discomfort. If this is not enough, if the occupant still does not feel at home, he can step over to a wall switch, throw the juice on the electric heater, back up to that apparatus as it glows, lift his coat tails, stick his hands in his pockets and give praise that he is not as other men.

BED SORES.

G. O. F. writes: What can be done for bed sores?

What preventive measures can be used where an elderly patient has to remain in bed and is practically helpless?

REPLY.

Bed sores result from continued pressure on poorly nourished tissue. In this they are related to varicose ulcer. Both can be prevented by improving nutrition and avoiding pressure. Both get well when pressure is removed and circulation and nutrition are improved.

To prevent bed sores turn the patient on the side. Use rubber rings and pads. Prevent the bedding from getting into valleys, hills and ridges. Maintain scrupulous cleanliness. Massage or rub softly with greased hands.

To cure follow the procedures used in prevention. Above all, relieve pressure. Maintaining cleanliness ranks second. The use of salves and local applications rank third. Among these applications adhesive plaster, gauze, balsam of Peru ointment, oxide of zinc ointment and other ointments have a place.

AN UNUSUAL SAFETY PLAY.

DURING the course of an evening's play there are many contracts which are defeated because of unfortunate ruffs by the defense. Many a seemingly ironclad final contract is defeated because one of Declarer's high cards is trumped by an insignificant deuce before the card can be removed from the opponent's hand.

However, in a recent Duplicate game at Crockford's Club, I was fortunate enough to be the only Declarer to fulfill a doubled game contract, because an unusual way was found to forestall the well-laid plans of the defense and prevent the impending ruff, which would have doomed the hand to defeat.

The hand was:

East—Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ J 10 8 3 ♡ 7 4 ◇ A K Q 10 2 ♣ A K
♠ 8 ♡ 10 9 3 ◇ 8 7 6 4 ♣ 9 8 6 5 2	N W E S	♠ K Q 5 ♡ A K Q J ◇ 8 2 ♣ 3
	♠ A 9 7 4 2 ♡ 6 5 ◇ J 9 5 ♣ 10 7 3	♣ Q J 4

The Bidding.

South	West	North	East
			1♡
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	3♡
3♠	Pass	4♠	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

The Opening lead was the heart 10, which East promptly overtook with the Knave and led the diamond 8. I now took stock of the situation. From the bidding, the East hand was correctly marked with a string of hearts, topped by the Ace-King-Queen-Knave, and also the King-Queen of spades, guarded at least once. His diamond return was obviously a singleton and it was apparent that a diamond ruff was the only way the contract could be defeated, as all I had to lose was 2 heart tricks and 1 trump trick. How could West be placed in the lead to allow East to trump a diamond lead? East must have some hope of putting in his partner or he would not have made his quick shift to the diamond suit. That hope, I further deduced, could only be in the heart suit. In other words, East was missing either the 9 or 8 of hearts and would lead a low heart as soon as he obtained the lead with one of his spade honors. This would place West in the lead. How could I forestall such a play? That was the problem.

One vague possibility appeared. From East's strong bidding, it was very likely that he had something in clubs. If East had the Queen and Knave of clubs, this impending ruff could be avoided. Accordingly, I took the diamond return with the diamond 10 in Dummy and immediately played my Ace and King of clubs. I now led the Knave of spades from Dummy, and East, of course, split his equals. I took the Ace of spades in my hand, and now, before giving East his high spade, which was the obvious play, I led the club 10 from my own hand, discarding on it the losing heart in Dummy. Since the heart trick was a loser anyway, nothing was lost by giving it up in this devious manner. For a change, the well-laid plans of the opponents did not "gang agley," as West was forced to play small on my Ten-of-Clubs lead, and East had to take the trick. The rest was smooth sailing. East returned another heart, which was ruffed in Dummy, and then I gave him his high spade. His last trump was drawn, and the rest of the tricks were taken by a trump and the high diamonds.

A well-planned defense was beaten by a strong counter attack.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

The bidding and play of the hand printed below will be discussed tomorrow:

South—Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ J 4 3 2 ♡ J 10 7 ◇ 10 7 6 5 ♣ K Q
♠ 10 9 6 5 ♡ Q 9 6 ◇ Q 8 4 ♣ 10 7 2	N W E S	♠ K Q 8 7 ♡ 5 3 ◇ 9 2 ♣ J 8 5 4 3
	♠ A ♡ A K 8 4 2 ◇ A K J 3 ♣ A 9 6

Study the hand, decide how you would bid and play it, and then compare the results with those shown in tomorrow's article.

THE PARADINE CASE

By ROBERT HICHENS

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Malcolm Keane, one of England's most celebrated advocates, has been briefed by Sir Simon Flaquer, solicitor, to defend his client, Mrs. Paradine, against a charge of murdering her husband, Col. Paradine.

While Mrs. Paradine is in Halloway jail awaiting trial, Lord Horfield is appointed judge of the case.

Sir Malcolm and his pretty wife, Gay, who bears a subtle resemblance to Mrs. Paradine, have been happily married for ten years, but the husband's obsession with the Paradine case is beginning to cast a dark shadow over their happiness. Sir Malcolm finds himself fascinated by the mysterious blonde, whom he passionately desires to save. Subconsciously he is not wholly convinced of her innocence, but he declares emphatically to Sir Simon that he believes her innocent. Sir Simon is skeptical about the defense Sir Malcolm has prepared, which is to suggest that the colonel's servant, William Marsh, who had been Paradine's batman in the war, might have had a hand in the murder. Sir Malcolm is afraid of Lord Horfield, who seems to have a streak of cruelty that manifests itself toward women who come up for trial before him.

Lady Horfield, in confidence to Sir Malcolm, expresses her fears for Mrs. Paradine.

Col. Paradine had been blinded in the war and had never seen his beautiful wife, who had been a servant before her marriage. She is a Dane, who had been rescued from a life of degradation by a philanthropic American. After a short period in the United States, she had settled in London to earn her living, and had married the rich Col. Paradine after the war.

Sir Malcolm goes alone to the north of England to look over the Paradine home at Hindley. On his return he invites the Horfields to dinner and the theater, against Gay's wishes. The dinner passes off in a friendly enough spirit. Leaving for the theater Keane takes Lady Horfield in his car and Gay accompanies Lord Horfield, who makes love to her, much to her disgust.

When the Paradine trial opens, Gay goes to it with Judith Flaquer, unknown to Malcolm. Mrs. Paradine is put on the stand and testifies that William Marsh had pursued her with unwelcome attentions and that she had as a last resort complained to the colonel the afternoon before he died. Marsh is called to the stand and gives the lie to Mrs. Paradine, testifying that it was she who pursued him.

"YOU have given evidence that Marsh was impertinent to you, both at Hindley and in London. Did you ever resent it?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever speak to any one of it?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"I was ashamed."

"Why should you be ashamed? Was it your fault?"

"No, of course not."

"Now, Mrs. Paradine, if, as you say, you admired, respected and loved your husband, why did you allow a valet, your husband's valet, to make love to you and not complain of it to your husband?"

"I knew it would upset him terribly if I told him."

"You thought it preferable to let it go on, this servant's love making, and let your husband believe that all was well?"

"My husband depended on Marsh."

"Didn't he depend on you?"

"Yes, of course."

"Do you think Marsh was more important to him than you, his wife?"

"No, of course not."

"Then why didn't you complain of his alleged gross insult to you?"

"I hoped to stop it without upsetting my husband."

"What did you do to stop it?"

"I spoke to Marsh."

"Did your speaking have any effect?"

"I still had reason to complain from time to time."

"And yet kept silence? Didn't seek assistance from any one?"

"I hated to speak of such a thing."

"You mean that modesty held you back?" suggested counsel with the suspicion of a sneer. "Remembering your past, you say that?"

Keane sprang to his feet.

"My lord, I protest! There has been nothing in the evidence that reflects on the witness' past. I protest against that insinuation."

"I did not find anything objectionable in the learned counsel's remark," said the judge, looking straight at Keane. "I took it in the sense he intended."

"It was a gross insinuation against the blameless past of the witness," said Keane angrily.

"I do not think so, Sir Malcolm," said Lord Horfield in an almost purring voice. (To counsel for the crown): "Proceed!"

Keane threw himself down in his seat, this time pale with anger.

"I will leave that" said Sir Joseph softly and looking at Keane, who stared indignantly at him.

The next question startled the court.

"Do you think William Marsh very good looking?" asked counsel.

Keane again sprang to his feet.

"My lord, I object. What can such a question have to do with this case?"

"My lord, if I am allowed to proceed without these continual interruptions from my learned brother, it will be apparent that the question is cogent," said Sir Joseph, but totally without heat.

"I allow the question," said Lord Horfield: "I must ask you, Sir Malcolm, not to interfere with counsel. I will interfere if I see reason."

"Sit down, Sir Malcolm!" said the judge, sternly. "I have already said that I allow the question."

For a moment Keane kept on his feet with a defiant look on his face. Then his junior pulled at his robe and whispered up something to him, and he yielded and sat heavily down.

"Now please go on!" said the judge to counsel for the crown.

"Do you think William Marsh a very good looking man?" said counsel to the witness.

"No, not at all!" she said in a hard, sharp voice.

"Ah?" said counsel. "You have considered that question?"

"You asked me."

"But had you considered that question already? At Hindley?"

"No, never. Marsh was a servant. I couldn't consider him in that way."

"But had not you also been a servant?"

"Long ago."

"Is it so odd for a former servant to think about the looks of another servant?"

"I was the mistress of the house in which Marsh was a servant."

"We know that. But did you not in fact think Marsh wonderfully good looking?"

"I never thought about such a thing."

"Not even when he, as you allege, made love to you?"

"I have told you," said the witness with a sort of sulky emphasis.

"Very well!"

Counsel glanced toward the three women in the jury box

"Although Marsh lived for months with you in your house and, according to your statement, made love to you, yet you never noticed his looks? Is that what you tell the jury?"

"I couldn't think of my husband's servant in such a way."

KING
JUNGLE

Exciting tale of adventure and love, set in Africa and America, begins

SUNDAY,
Jan. 22,
in
The Washington Post.

"He meant nothing to you?"

"Not in that way."

"In what way did he mean anything to you?"

"I valued him as a servant to whom my husband was greatly attached and who had always seemed greatly attached to him."

"You valued him for his attachment to your husband whom, according to you, he was trying to wrong in the most grievous way possible? Is that what you tell the jury?"

Witness was silent.

"Please answer."

"My husband was accustomed to Marsh, and as he was blind I didn't like to upset him."

"For that reason only you endured what you alleged to have been Marsh's disgusting attentions?"

"I tried to do the best for my husband."

"No personal reason?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"I will try to make myself clear."

Sir Joseph leaned forward, and suddenly dropping his bland voice and gentle manner, thundered out:

"I ask you, on your oath, did you not refrain from complaining about Marsh because you were madly in love with him?"

Mrs. Paradine moved sharply back in her chair as if she had been struck then got up from it and stood facing counsel. Then in a heavy, smothered voice, and reddening from her forehead down to her uncovered throat, she said violently:

"A lie! A lie!"

"Were you not in love with Marsh all the time you lived in the house with him at Hindley?"

"That is a lie."

"Were you not madly in love with him in London?"

Mrs. Paradine leaned forward in her turn, and a smile that suggested an intense bitterness of satire transformed her face, then with a triumphant gesture, she exclaimed in a loud voice:

"Madly in love with Marsh and go to my husband and ask him to send Marsh away! Is that what you think? Then you know nothing of women!"

And she began to laugh while the crowd watched her breathless. Her low laughter was heard through the whole court. Meanwhile, Sir Joseph Farrell waited, holding his robes and with the expression of a man who still had many shots in his locker. At last the low laugh died away and the witness said before counsel could speak:

"Your own witness has given you the lie—Marsh himself."

"Kindly cease to make statements and attend to me. You are here to answer my questions. Is it not the fact that soon after you married Col. Paradine, and discovered that Marsh took no interest in women, you resolved to overcome that indifference?"

"It is a lie."

"And set yourself to entice and attract him?"

"It is a lie."

"Had you not great opportunities for being with Marsh?"

"I saw him sometimes."

"Did you not pursue him with your attentions?"

"It is a lie."

"Were you not absolutely set on overcoming his indifference to women?"

"No."

"And," counsel lowered his voice suddenly and spoke almost in a whisper, "did you not finally succeed in doing so?"

All the color had now died out of the prisoner's face, but her long neck was still mottled with red. Instead of answering the question, to the amazement of the court, she turned away from Sir Joseph Farrell and, with an expression of menace on her face, gazed at her own counsel. And as she did this the crowd saw Keane's eyes look away from her. His head drooped slightly. His powerful shoulders were hunched. He stared down at the ground. His whole attitude suggested guilt, as hers suggested a silent and terrible accusation.

"Answer me!" said Sir Joseph. "Did you not finally succeed in your object and induce this unfortunate man who, as witness after witness has testified, almost worshiped his master, to be false to his trust, false to himself, and to betray that master?"

"I deny that," witness said in a smothered voice.

She sat down suddenly in the chair from which she had risen and for a moment looked as if she were going to faint, for her head drooped toward her left shoulder and her body seemed out of control.

One of the female officers touched her and whispered to her. She shook her head, put up a hand to her cheek and pulled herself up.

"Are you feeling ill?" Lord Horfield asked. "Do you wish anything? Shall we interrupt the cross-examination to allow you to recover yourself?"

"No, my lord, I am—perfectly well. But—these horrid—lies——" her voice died away.

After a moment's pause, while the court was wrapped in a breathless stillness, Lord Horfield signed to Sir Joseph to continue. During this moment Keane had sat motionless, his tall figure drawn up rigidly, his hands locked tightly together, his eyes fixed on Mrs. Paradine. It was by now obvious to every practical barrister in court that counsel for the crown was cleverly grounding his cross-examination upon the previous examination by counsel for the defense. He was drawing a bow at a venture. His cross-examination was surely a suddenly conceived improvization, suggested entirely to Sir Joseph Farrell by Keane. Lawyers often talked of it afterward as one of the most unexpected departures in a sensational trial.

"You deny what I have suggested?" persisted counsel, taking up the thread of his cross-examination.

"You have your own witness' evidence against it," said Mrs. Paradine.

"We will see as to that—presently."

Mrs. Paradine's large eyes widened for a moment and her lips parted. The remark had sounded like a threat, and for the first time acute fear seemed written in her face.

"But at any rate you deny it?" added counsel.

"It is a lie," said the witness, spacing out the words and putting a heavy accent on each of them.

Counsel for the crown looked at the jury, setting his shaven lips tightly together.

"Now, as to the visit to London!" he resumed. "You suggested it?"

"Yes."

"What was the real reason of this suggestion on your part?"

"I have said—I wanted my husband to see a good doctor."

"Anxiety for his health prompted you, although you thought him quite well?"

"I was not exactly anxious, but I thought he should see a first rate doctor."

"Ah! Any other reason?"

"I thought in London I should see less of Marsh."

"You thought that in London you would see less of Marsh. You seriously tell the jury that was one of your reasons for wanting to go up to London?"

"Yes."

"Very well."

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

Two color decollete insets are as chic for spring as ever. (Sketched on Fifth avenue.)

IF you're a damsel who likes to dress correctly for your favorite sport, you'll be glad to know, I think, that the regulation, English, perfectly tailored sports things are coming into their own again. No more will you have to golf, hike, ride, hunt or any little thing like that in togs that are much more suggestive of a stage costumer's dream of what a chorus girl should wear than clothes actually designed just for some particular sport.

The two things that distinguish these honest-to-goodness sports things are the heavy, expensive materials they're made of, and their masculine cut. Perhaps it's the natural effect of a frilly, feminine and fussy trend in fashions to turn miladi's thoughts wistfully to the swagger sports clothes that used to be—and what she thinks of always seems to come to pass, now doesn't it? At any rate all really up-to-the-minute department stores and especially shops are devoting lots of space and advertising to such things as rough tweed suits, long leather coats, sweaters, and so on, all the very latest word in smartness, and all untrimmed and unfussy, and able to stand the roughest weather without a whimper.

Incidentally, among these sports clothes I did see some jaunty raincoats that anyone could wear in town. These were loose and double-breasted, of waterproofed tweed with faint plaids, and have as perky an air under a sunny sky as they have under a teeming downpour.

How would you like to spend one afternoon in the garage—or have father do it one Saturday—or have the chauffeur do it—and emerge with play sandals and bedroom slippers and beach slippers for the kids all around, and no money spent and no questions asked? That's what you can do, after you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Post for this week's illustrated leaflet! Because it tells you how to make all of these things, for every member of the family—out of old automobile tires and inner tubes! This might be Friday, the 13th, for the others, but it's one lucky day for you—if you send for this leaflet. And don't think for a moment that the kids won't like these, or the grown-ups, either—because they exactly will, and so will you. Just make a few and see.

• • • •

Tops and bodices and sleeves and things all seem to prove that style interest is centered above the waist these days. There you have samples of it, in the three top half-figures I sketched for you today—above, a lovely bodice with inset of a different color; in the center, an odd collar and cowl effect, double of the material, and the material darker than the frock. The sleeves, too, are well done and unusual, and a bit of under-cuff peeps out in a contrasting color.

Then the collar below twists and goes around under the arms most oddly and effectively. Nice?

Au revoir.

What Today Means

"CAPRICORN."

IF January 13 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:30 a. m. to 8:50 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., and from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 a. m. to 10:45 a. m., and from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m.

Family relationships should prove productive of great happiness on this day; very little friction should be apparent in the home. Plans of a business nature formulated on this day may quite possibly meet with opposition from an unexpected source. Do not rely too much on others.

Born on January 13, the child will be inclined to be overcautious; he will tend to be hesitant in his thought and actions. Once started along a certain line of activity, he will display great tenacity of purpose. A will to win will carry him far. His interests will be varied and he may encounter difficulty in finding his life's work.

If January 13 is the date of your birth, you probably allow yourself to be too greatly influenced by your friends; neither your thoughts nor your time are your own. You are a person of many fears; fears of sickness, of financial difficulties, fear of public opinion, &c., you allow to take too prominent a place in your life. You think a great deal about the material things of life; money you are inclined to make your god. All of your energy is expended in attempting to satiate your material wants; you pamper yourself.

Born on January 13, you would seem to have possibilities were you to pursue a career in one of the arts. Newspaper work, or writing in some form or other would probably offer a commercial outlet for your talents. A practical mind, progressive in nature would lend itself to a career in some phase of banking, either investment or commercial. Your inquisitive nature, your curiosity about people and things, your ability to intelligently grasp and correlate facts, these qualities would seem to make it possible for you to follow successfully work of a research or investigatorial nature. Women born on this date enjoy gay surroundings, and are often inclined to neglect their more serious and practical duties in order to follow a gay social life.

Gas Valuation Hearing Date to Be Scheduled

The Public Utilities Commission will announce a date for a valuation hearing of the properties of the Washington & Georgetown Gas Light Co. and their subsidiaries in Montgomery County today after getting in touch with Harold E. West, chairman of the Maryland Public Service Commission, which has asked to sit in on the hearing.

It is probable that the valuation hearing will be scheduled for February 20 or 21. No figures are available for publication yet, however, according to Riley E. Elgen, vice chairman of the commission, as a number of corrections are being made in the report submitted the latter part of December.

Martin Will Address Women's Bar Group

Clarence Martin, president of the American Bar Association, will be honor guest at tomorrow night's banquet of the Women's Bar Association at the Mayflower Hotel. He will speak on "Some Work for the Woman Lawyer."

Other speakers will be Miss Helen Carloss, of the Department of Justice, and Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, founder of the association. Assistant United States Attorney Pearl McCall, the association's head, will preside.

Sewing Room Open at Night.

Beginning tonight the sewing room of the District Red Cross Chapter will be open from 7:30 until 10 p. m. on Fridays for persons who wish to aid in the making of garments for the city's needy.

CONTRAST

Here's a way of getting contrast you probably hadn't thought of—because it's so new! A spring print is appliqued on the sleeves of the fitted jacket in bands, the same print forms the frock top . . . and that, too, is appliqued on to the skirt. The effect is very flattering, especially if you want to look tall. In black with white and gray print. For a woman.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

ELMER TWITCHELL WRITES JUDGE LANDIS ON HIS PAY CUT.

DEAR Judge Landis:

Well, I see the depression has struck you and that you are now down to $40,000 a year, which is the lowest pay you have had to take since you left the bench and Standard Oil fines for the baseball parks and world series huddles. In the last two years you have cut your salary $25,000, which is no superficial scratch but a harakiri wound in anybody's money.

* * * *

You have my sympathy, but I think if you use an upper berth, do your own laundry and let the magnates reach for those dinner checks you will be able to weather the storm. I was surprised, judge, to know that you once got $65,000 a year as imperial kleagle of baseball. This salary, it seems, was fixed back in the prehorse-sense era when even the people in poor houses played ten-dollar-limit poker and hoboes complained to the railroads because there were no hangers under the cars for opera capes.

* * * *

It will be hard to get accustomed to living on $750 a week at first, but you will have to be philosophical about it. Money is going to be done away with, anyway, according to Technocracy, and there is no sense piling up a lot of dough when the pay-off will soon be made in "ergs" and "joules." Under this new system everything will be measured by energy, and as you have as much energy as anybody I know you should do pretty well, at that.

* * * *

Baseball, I notice, is going in for economy all over and after your splendid example I wouldn't be surprised to hear that Babe Ruth had decided to take $25,000 a year and gasoline money until things picked up. If baseball is as hard hit as the magnates say, I wouldn't even be surprised to see contracts made on a basis of barter. I mean a system in which Herb Pennock would be signed in return for a fox hound, a rifle, a case of tobacco and a bearskin cap, and Lou Gehrig held for another season by an offer of six slightly used blue suits, a pair of shoes, four new automobile tires, a second-hand radio and a barrel of apples.

* * * *

We might even read in the newspapers that Foxx and a square piano had been traded to the Yanks for Babe Ruth, a zither, twelve rabbits and a flannel nightgown. Be that as it may, I would hate to hear of your being traded back to the bench together with a keg of nails and an old-fashioned buggy in return for a good second baseman, a set of Harvard Classics and a motorcycle driven only 5,000 miles.

* * * *

Aviator Makes Talk For Engineering Group

Experiences of the kind that usually come the way of heroes in the more thrilling adventure stories were related by Walter Hinton, Washington aviator, who was the first man to pilot a plane across the Atlantic, in an illustrated talk before the Washington chapter of the American Association of Engineers last night at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mr. Hinton told of his experience in flying across the Atlantic, of his adventures in a runaway balloon, which started on Long Island and ended in the wilds around Hudson Bay, and of his experiences in the jungles of South America. He also told of the first exploration work done by airplane in 1924-25, which he helped to undertake.

Man Dies in Scaffold Fall; Inquest Today

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, Acting Coroner, this morning at 11:30 o'clock, will hold an inquest over the body of Arthur Carper, 60, who was killed yesterday when he fell from a scaffold near Twenty-first and Bryant streets northeast.

Carper, who lived at Four-and-a-half and N streets southeast, was employed by the Langdon Mill & Lumber Co. According to police, he fell about 8 feet. He died en route to Casualty Hospital. Dr. MacDonald said last night that investigation revealed no suspicious circumstances.

Swan Dinner

Migratory Fowls, Killed Illegally, Are Served at Walter Reed.

Seven whistling swans, rare and beautiful migratory waterfowl, were served up steaming at Walter Reed Hospital. These birds were given to the hospital for food purposes by the Bureau of Biological Survey.

The swans were shot illegally near Havre de Grace by three hunters who were arrested and who will be prosecuted in the Federal Court at Baltimore.

The swans are protected against hunters under the migratory bird treaty act.

BIG DROP IN REVENUE OF TRACTION FIRM IS REPORTED BY HANNA

Blames Slump and Taxicab Competition in Statement to Stockholders.

A combination of the depression with the competition of taxicabs and private automobiles was responsible for a reduction of $616,949.30, or 16.1 per cent, in the revenue of Capital Traction Co. during 1932. John H. Hanna, president of the company, informed its stockholders to this effect at their annual meeting yesterday.

Stating that while none can predict now what the solution of the problem facing mass transportation companies will be, he said there is little doubt that it will be discovered. In his annual report, he declared that mass transportation of passengers is even more essential to city life now than ever before and the continued growth and prosperity of the city depends on continuation of adequate transportation facilities.

He insisted that not only must the service now furnished be continued, but it must be improved, made more attractive and extended to meet the growing needs of the territory served. To do this by private capital, he reminded, requires cooperation of all interested in the city's growth.

Opposes Public Ownership.

Stating that public carriers can not in the future continue to be used as tax gatherers, he sees no just reason why users of mass transportation vehicles or those whose money is invested in property put to such public use should be compelled to pay for salaries of crossing policemen or for paving used more by competitors than themselves or other similar charges any more than should users of private automobiles or taxis.

He expressed the directors' belief that while the merger of the companies will by no means solve the difficult problems in their entirety, it will result in economies and will make possible such constructive planning for the future that the new company will be able to take full advantage of improved conditions.

Throughout the year, the report continues, the company was in competition with "hordes of taxicabs, operated under conditions which, we are reliably informed, result in an average earning to the operators of something less than $1 per day for 10 or more hours of work." The 20-cent taxi rate "for rides as much as 3 or 4 miles in length, offers a competition with our service which is very difficult to meet."

Relief From Taxi Competition.

Mr. Hanna feels that real relief from taxicab competition will unquestionably come when economic conditions affecting employment are so improved that men can find jobs giving a reasonable wage and will not be willing to work under the distressing conditions which taxicab drivers now face.

Dealing with taxes, the report informs stockholders that the company's management is giving careful attention to the whole tax problem and is endeavoring to the best of its ability to reduce the amount of the present burden and resist any threatened increase.

The report announced the total saving from wage reductions and from combination and elimination of jobs was at the rate of $174,133 a year but that as no wage reductions were made until April 1, and some of them later, this full amount was not reflected in the year's operations. Other pay roll savings have been effected by changing hours or reducing the number of persons employed but with all these changes it has not been necessary to lay off any employes. Executive salaries as a whole, Mr. Hanna explains, are less than they were 20 years ago.

Financial Statement.

The financial statement shows railway passenger revenue for the year as $2,918,508.85, a decline of $536,742.72 from 1931; bus passenger revenus, $211,894.37, a recession of $24,997.99 from the preceding year; special bus revenue, $66,380.26, a decrease of $39,055.22, making total transportation revenues of $3,196,783.48, a falling off of $600,795.93 from the previous year.

Revenues from operations other than transportation were $23,807.56, or $16,153.37 less than the year prior, and gross operating revenue totaled $3,220,591.04, $616,949.30 under 1931's.

Net income for the year was $57,266.02, a reduction of $308,707.90 compared with 1931.

Stockholders reelected all the following directors: Mr. Hanna, George E. Hamilton, John M. Perry, Charles C. Glover, jr., G. Thomas Dunlop, Merle Thorpe and S. P. Thompson.

Boxers Use of Gymnasiums Favored in Straw Ballots

Avalanche of Votes Received by The Post Are Overwhelmingly for Granting Columbus Dean's Request for School Hall Loan.

A miniature avalanche of ballots swept into the editorial offices of The Post last night as first day ended of the poll on the question of permitting intercollegiate boxing bouts in public school gymnasiums. By a ratio of 31 to 1 those favoring the sport outnumbered its opponents.

The tabulation showed 315 persons favoring the use of public school gymnasiums for intercollegiate bouts with 10 persons voting against it. An analysis of the votes showed virtually every section of the city was represented, while there was a scattering of a dozen votes from Maryland and Virginia.

The voice of Representative Robert H. Clancy (Republican), of Michigan, was added last night to those who have urged the Board of Education to grant the application of Dean John R. Fitzpatrick of Columbus University for permission to use McKinley High School gymnasium for intercollegiate boxing.

"It is my opinion," he said in a letter to the Board of Education, "that amateur intercollegiate boxing is a clean sport and should be encouraged, and further, that there is a demand for it in the District of Columbia."

The Post is conducting the poll as a result of an invitation of the committee on buildings and grounds of the Board of Education for expressions of public opinion on the subject. The ballots will be presented to the Board of Education Wednesday, when the request is to be decided.

What do you think?

Any one who wishes to vote on the question may clip the adjoining ballot and send it to The Post.

BOXING BALLOT

Believing there is great interest in the controversy before school officials on the use of school buildings for amateur boxing, The Washington Post offers its readers an opportunity to express an opinion on the matter. The results of the poll will be presented to the Board of Education at its next meeting.

The question on which those interested are to cast their votes is:

DO YOU FAVOR THE USE OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS FOR AMATEUR BOXING?

Check the Proper Space.

Yes ☐ No ☐

HEARING OF 2 POLICE IN ATTACK SET TODAY

Assault With Weapon Laid to Ninth Precinct Men by Druggist.

Policemen Luther C. Wise, of 1419 Trinidad avenue northeast, and Jeremiah J. Cullinane, of 1116 Morse street northeast, both attached to the Ninth Police Precinct, will be arraigned in Police Court today to answer charges of assault with a dangerous weapon upon Dr. George W. Beasley, colored owner of a drug store at 241 Virginia avenue southeast, last Sunday night.

Assistant District Attorney Michael F. Keogh issued the warrant for the policemen's arrest yesterday in Police Court, and suggested to Inspector A. J. Headley, who is investigating the case, that the two men be placed under $500 bond for their appearance in court.

According to Dr. Beasley, the two policemen assaulted him when he attempted to prevent them from molesting two colored girls, Mattie Ford and Vergie Toogood, of 10 Hackman street southeast.

The druggist said that the policemen drew their guns and informed him that they were police and when he attempted to enter his store they barred his way. Beasley also said that the men laid hands on a friend of his, Mike Brooks, of 909 Fourth street southeast, who was with him at the time.

Legion Post Condemns Defaulting Governments

Condemning all countries which have defaulted in the payment of their war debts to the United States, particularly France, the Sergt. Jasper Post, No. 13, of the American Legion, last night urged the cancellation of the proposed national convention in Paris in 1937.

A resolution embodying such a recommendation was adopted and will be submitted to the District Department for presentation at the 1933 national convention.

Gen. Fries to Speak at Rally.

Maj. Gen. Amos Fries, retired, will be the chief speaker at an Americanization rally tonight of the Victory Unit, American Legion Auxiliary, at the Sears, Roebuck Art Galleries, 1106 Connecticut avenue northwest.

NEW D. C. AIRPORT BILL IS INTRODUCED

Bingham Would Give Control to Public Buildings and Parks Director.

Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, yesterday introduced the second bill in 48 hours providing for establishment of a municipal airport for Washington at the south end of Highway Bridge.

The measure would place the airport under the jurisdiction of the director of Public Buildings and Public Parks, whereas his earlier measure gave the Secreary of Commerce this authority.

Coincident with his introduction of the bill, Senator Otis F. Glenn (Republican), Illinois, chairman of the parks and highways subcommittee of the Senate District Committee, ordered hearings on the measure at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning. Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, aviatrix of transatlantic fame, will be the principal witness.

Under the bill introduced yesterday by Senator Bingham, the director of Public Buildings and Public Parks would have authority to sublease the airport and various concessions, for a consideration.

The Washington and Hoover airport properties would be leased for $100,000 a year, and sections of the governmental experiment farm and the present military road, taken over. Under this arrangement, Bingham said, the annual cost to the Capital would be about $25,000.

Parent-Teacher Group Hears Mrs. Bradford

President Hoover's recent conference on the crisis in education was described by Mrs. Hugh Bradford, president of the National Association of Parents and Teachers, when she spoke last night at the meeting of the Thomson Parent-Teacher Association.

Mrs. Bradford lauded the cooperative efforts of the American Federation of Labor in educational work and praised the view of the conference that public funds should be expended in keeping children in school rather than in public construction work. President J. T. Robb, of the Thomson group, presided.

Historic Residence Is Damaged by Fire

Fire caused by a defective flue from the furnace did considerable damage to the first floor rooms at the home of Mrs. Margaret C. Buckingham, 1525 H street northwest.

The home, a three-story brick structure, is one of the few historic residences remaining in the neighborhood.

TRAFFIC TOLL

TO DATE.

More than 75 per cent of the fatal and serious accidents occur at street intersections which are not regulated by lights, signs, or traffic policemen.

There are apparently very few motorists who realize that there is a regulation which applies to these intersections which are not controlled by policemen or traffic devices.

The regulation follows:

"Operators of vehicles approaching an intersection shall give the right of way to vehicles approaching from their right, but a vehicle making a right or left turn shall yield to through traffic within the intersection or so close thereto as to constitute an immediate hazard."

Accident figures are:

INAUGURAL TICKET OFFICE SWAMPED WITH APPLICATIONS

Demands Include Blocks of Seats Up to 2,000 From Over Country.

A landslide of applications for tickets to the Roosevelt inaugural reviewing stands yesterday forced the inaugural committee's ticket committee to seek another set of offices for the handling of general public distribution.

After this week, it was announced, rooms 535-36-37 in the Washington Building will comprise the public sale headquarters. Reservations from out of town will be handled in the existing offices.

Indicative of local interest in the inaugural plans, Treasury employes yesterday made joint application for a block of 2,000 seats. Out-of-town groups have evinced almost similar interest. A Pittsburgh organization has requested 100 seats, a Michigan party, coming by bus, 250 seats, and hundreds of bids for smaller blocks are on file.

Many Special Trains.

Many special trains from all over the Nation are expected to bring inaugural parties. The committee on distnguished guests, headed by Ray Baker, has received notification that parties of Democratic supporters will come by special train from California and Alabama, most of the prominent political leaders of the latter State being expected on the Southern special train.

The committee on housing and hospitality, of which Mrs. Blair Bannister is chairman, yesterday opened offices in the Willard Hotel, with Miss Helen Nance as executive secretary. Mrs. Bannister said her committee was seeking a list of more than 3,000 rooms, which will be available for inaugural visitors. Lists prepared by the Bicentennial Commission, Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. will be used as a basis for the list, but will be considerably augmented.

Hotels Promise Cooperation.

Mrs. Bannister yesterday called to all who have space available to register with her committee at the Willard. Each registrant, she said, will be investigated as to rate and accommodations before being recommended to inaugural visitors.

Every effort will be put forward, said Mrs. Bannister, to see that no boosting of hotel and boarding house rates takes place as the inaugural crowds pour in. Hotel proprietors have promised their cooperation, she added.

Young Man Exonerated In Automobile Death

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday directed a verdict in favor of John A. Decatur, 21 years old, who was being tried before him on an indictment charging him with manslaughter in connection with the death of Arthur Moran.

Upon the conclusion of the Government's case the defense attorney, Dan S. Ring, pointed out to Justice O'Donoghue that there was no showing of gross neglignece, as the car which Decatur was driving when he struck Moran was shown to have been going only 15 miles an hour. Justice O'Donoghue thereupon directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. The accident happened last September.

District Bill Proposes Tax Redemption Delay

Eight local measures, including a bill extending the time for redemption of property sold for taxes to three years, will be considered by the House District fiscal affairs subcommittee at a meeting at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Other measures to be taken up by the subcommittee, headed by Representative Ralph Gilbert (Democrat), Kentucky, include bills to impose a license tax on electricians, on fuel hucksters and on retail merchants, and a measure exempting dwelling places from attachment proceedings.

NOONAN IS MODEST IN CAR FARE VICTORY

Declines Honors Planned by Congress for His Work for School Children.

Duty is duty and is recompense enough in itself—this evidently is the tenet of John J. Noonan, 3154 Highland place northwest, who yesterday bowed in acknowledgment of the action of the District Committee of Congress, but declined the proposed testimonial.

On the motion of Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, the committee adopted a resolution asking Superintendnet Frank W. Ballou to make arrangements necessary for the extension of recognition by school children and the public to Mr. Noonan "for his successful efforts in getting a law passed by Congress providing for a 3-cent fare on street cars and buses for school children."

In a letter to Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the committee, Mr. Noonan thanked the committee for the signal honor, but asked that the resolution be rescinded for the following reasons:

"First, I feel it was a duty for anyone knowing the deplorable conditions among children of the District to have done what they could to alleviate them, and that no one is entitled to credit for such effort.

"Secondly, I feel that, due to the depression, and the need of bending all efforts to help better conditions, it would be unwise to spend any money for the purpose mentioned. I would prefer it should go toward providing food for children who are going to school without breakfast or without money to provide lunch.

"Thirdly, I feel that any success in winning this car fare clause is due to the unstinted efforts of the press; they have merely used me for copy."

Hoover Autographs Book for Library

A copy of "The New Day," a compilation of President Hoover's campaign speeches in 1928, yesterday was autographed by the Chief Executive and sent to the American Merchant Marine Library Association headquarters at 1340 Connecticut avenue northwest.

The association took occasion on receipt of the autographed copy of the book to appeal for more contributions from the public for the benefit of literary-minded seamen.

Pistol Toting Charge Brings Year Sentence

A sentence of 365 days in jail was meted out to Harrison P. Brown, colored, yesterday in Police Court when he was convicted of carrying a concealed weapon.

Brown was also charged with stabbing Glenn Craven, also colored, but on that charge "he got a break" when Craven refused to prosecute.

KEECH WILL OPPOSE 1924 CONSENT PLAN

People's Counsel Feels Its Revival Would Be Step Back in Utility War.

While the Public Utilities Commission was deliberating on its answer to the counter proposal of the Potomac Electric Power Co. as to rate reductions for this year, People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech stated yesterday that he would be definitely opposed to any arrangement which would revive the old consent decree of 1924.

"We would be relinquishing ground which we have already virtually won, to accept the proposal of the power company, to make the suggested compromise arrangement permanent by inclusion in the consent decree," Mr. Keech said.

The people's counsel was one of the first to advocate an abrogation of the consent decree and the establishment of a new sliding scale by the commission, without resort to approval by the District Supreme Court.

The power company Tuesday replied to a proposal of the utilities body, by suggesting that the plan urged for this year be made permanent by substituting the compromise scale in the consent decree.

Riley E. Elgin, vice chairman of the commission, stated yesterday that the commission hopes to effect an amicable settlement of the difference between it and the power company, and that negotiations toward this end are now under way.

Two Boys Are Released On Bond in Theft Case

Alleged to have perpetrated thefts for the thrill they got out of it, two boys, Ralph Preston, 17 years old, and Thomas Haynes, 19 years old, yesterday were held under $1,000 bond when they were given preliminary hearing in Police Court. They will be arraigned January 20.

Two others, Conrad B. Wayne, 17 years old, and Robert S. Osborne, 17 years old, were released in the custody of their parents on recommendation of Assistant United States Attorney, Michael F. Keogh. The latter two were held in connection with the taking of the automobile of Commander Harold Dodd. Four others, arrested in a round-up will be arraigned today in Juvenile Court. They were under the age limit and could not be tried in Police Court.

Society at G. W. U. To Fete Scientists

Medical Group Tonight to Honor Dr. Smith and Gen. Russell.

The Smith-Reed-Russell Society of the George Washington University School of Medicine will entertain the two survivors of the three eminent scientists for whom the society is named, at a banquet tonight at 8 o'clock at the University Club.

The honor guests are Dr. Theobald Smith, who recently retired as director of the Rockefeller Institute at Princeton, and Gen. Frederick F. Russell, director of the International Health Division of the Rockefeller Foundation of New York. Dr. Walter Reed, the third man, died a few years after his work on yellow fever.

These scientists were all at one time members of the faculty of the school of medicine. Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, faculty members and emeritus professors will be present at the gathering in addition to the student members of the society.

ENGINEER DEPLORES TECHNOCRACY PART IN OUSTING WORKERS

Ralph Flanders Sees Merit in Short Labor Week, But Not Solution.

Criticism of technocracy because it lays emphasis on a substitution of power for human labor was voiced last night by Ralph E. Flanders, noted engineer and vice president and general manager of the Jones & Lamson Machine Co., of Springfield, Vt., at a joint meeting of Catholic University engineering students and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Pointing out that the use of power is of comparative unimportance, Mr. Flanders declared that what is important is that high production machinery tends to make the larger percentage of costs of production capital costs and the less percentage of labor costs.

Short Working Week.

"When the high costs are capital ones," he explained, "it is more difficult to distribute purchasing power so that the goods produced can be sold."

Granting that the policy of the short working week has undoubted usefulness, Mr. Flanders declared that the main difficulty is that it presents no direct way of helping the spread that would result between wages and prices. He pointed out that the short work week will lead directly to increased leisure and that more goods will come from an increased spread between wages and and prices.

The engineer conceded that the short work week does offer indirect ways of meeting the problem. One advantage, he said, would be an initial spread of employment and the elimination of schemes for distribution of work in hard times.

Inherent Stability Needed.

"If combined with fairly high overtime payments, the short work week will help purchasing power in good times, and result in a more adequate adjustment in hard times," he said. "However, the system should by all means be equalized by suitable legislation in various States, so that the more handicapped States would not hinder others.

"Inherent stability is needed in business, independent of detailed planning and manipulation," Mr. Flanders told the engineers. He said that there are already signs toward this goal.

Man Hurt in Collision.

Henry C. Quill, 42, of 208 Fourteenth place northeast, suffered deep scalp lacerations and a possible fracture of his skull yesterday when his car was in collision with the automobile of Joseph Heil, of 1907 L street northwest, yesterday afternoon. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Boy, 9, Is Struck by Auto.

Speres Poppefatis, 9, was struck yesterday afternoon on Indiana avenue between Second and Third streets northwest, by the car of Thomas E. Crabtree, 30, of 703 M street northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for a bruised hip and cuts about the body.
